Letters

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, brevity is encouraged. Letters are subject to editing for length and style, but without changing the intent of the letter writer. Viewpoints on all matters are acceptable following the guidelines of good taste. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, but names may be withheld upon request.

Helping our children

Dear Editor:

I want to thank Judith Eisner for the excellent editorial that she wrote for the July 10 edition of the Carmel Pine Cone.

The lack of meaningful activities for young people in our area, about which she wrote, has long been of deep concern to me.

When children reach adolescence it is normal and desirable that they look increasingly to the community around them for clues as to: (a) what that community expects from them, and (b) more importantly, how they fit into the world outside of the family as they grow toward adulthood.

I have yet to meet a parent who doesn't care about what his child does or where he goes, but the parent knows that his child needs to test himself as an individual, and this often carries with it risk to the youngster and anxiety to his parents.

There are fewer hazards in a community which recognizes the need for constructive activity for young people outside of the home and away from school. Scouts, the "Y," youth centers and church groups have traditionally met these needs in the larger community, while the schools have gone beyond the "three R's" to provide sports, music, dramatic arts and special interest clubs outside of regular class hours.

The Carmel area now finds itself in the position of losing many of the school-related extracurricular activities that its youngsters have enjoyed, due to an acute lack of funds. At the same time, it has become apparent to a growing number of citizens that we have failed to provide much else for youngsters to do. This is an old problem in Carmel, and one that produces much discussion and hand-wringing, but little else.

The few fine activities that do exist, such as Youth Baseball, the Carmel Valley Youth Center, 4-H Clubs and Boy Scouts, are the result of adults (parents, businessmen and others) getting together and working hard toward specific goals. We need much more of this kind of constructive activity on the part of the adult community in Carmel and Carmel Valley. The kids need to see that a lot of us really care about what they do.

Individual parents cannot fight a community that offers its children drugs and alcohol more readily than it offers them worthwhile activities. The kids need to know that we value their presence in our community, that their youth and vitality enrich us all. They need to know that we want them to be participants in, and contributors to, our community life.

Since there is no political or geographical center for the community of young people, which stretches from Jamesburg to Big Sur to Carmel Woods (an area of approximately 600 square miles), there is no agency or group to which we can look for leadership. The Carmel Unified School District may be able to act as an umbrella, for it shares in our concern about this problem, but it hasn't the resources to solve the problem. The solution must come from caring individuals and organizations in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

I will be happy to meet with other concerned citizens so that a coalition can be formed and some answers can be found.

We owe it to the kids.

Beach bash

Dear Editor:

What's bigger than the winter Bing Crosby, the summer Bach Festival, the fall Sand Castle playpen contest, and bigger than the Scottish Games Bag Pipe Band?

Where is the biggest, informal, unorganized (thank God) grooving-in-the-sand bonfire, barbecue, beer, booze, and a little pot-for-posterity blowout (or up) picnic held each year?

Of course, it's Carmel's Gingerbread-by-the-Sea, U.S.A., annual 4th of July commemorative celebration.

Carmel's a funny little town; they don't allow many things to happen, like any soft live music in any of their many restaurants, except the old, bald Bach (without the beat or bounce) Festival at Carmel's Sunset Center. However, the 4th of July is one time even Carmel's little old ladies in sneakers tilt some liquid spirits to the spirit of '76.

To all this, I say (with tolerance) a yahoo to "Uncle Sam Day."

As anyone knows, after you've lived on the Peninsula for a while, you learn to love it, even the unpredictable weather with its sad summer fog. One thing about living here is if you have to work like a fool all of your life to survive, you quickly come to the conclusion you would rather be here than anywhere else. I know, because that's what I decided back in 1961, when I couldn't find a parking place, but liked the gingerbread atmosphere and breathable air.

As for the "Big Beach Bash," I imagine many Carmelites consider the big 4th bang an intrusion into their personal paradise (in some cases I may even agree with them). However, to the oldtimers, to the buck-stops-here-city-fathers, to the Please-look-the-other-way Carmel Police Department, and especially to the city workers who have to return everything back to normal in the following days (clean-up):

Smile, if you can, because I believe the annual Uncle Sam beach orgy just ain't gonna go away. Sorry.

Those (bleep) parking zones

Dear Editor:

This is undoubtedly the most stupid thing the Carmel City Council has ever done.

From Junipero down to the Pine Inn they painted green 20-minute parking zones on the cross streets. Formerly, they were one-hour zones. Can you imagine the month of August—at the height of the tourist season? Little old ladies and little old men trying to maneuver in and out of these 20-minute zones. Look at it now—nothing but a Grand Central traffic jam—and the meter maid adding to the congestion and confusion while she blocks traffic.

I'm a little old man who is going to open a driving school in Carmel as to how to get in and out of a 20-minute zone.

Rescue at beach

Dear Editor:

On Saturday morning, July 12th, the south end of Carmel beach was almost empty, except for a few dogs, a few surfers and a sparse number of morning walkers.

One small boy was standing alone, watching two other young boys out in the cold surf. I suddenly realized their screams were not from pleasure, but from panic. The waves were strong and pulling them farther and farther from shore. One boy managed to make it back to the beach as the other one drifted beyond the outermost waves.

The smallest boy and I called to two surfers, who finally realized we were asking for help.

They made their way over to the boy in trouble, got him on a board and, after a long struggle with the current, got him ashore.

The rescuer is named Mark Leo of Monterey. He is 15 years old and was not sure whether or not they would make it safely in. He and his friend were very brave. No one will thank them.

To return to the swimmers. I asked the boys where their parents were. "Up at the house." A teen-age girl appeared, one of their group.

When I told her to get some clothes on the boy, and also told her they had no business being in the water, or alone on the beach, her only retort was:

"You dumb bitch."

So much for a morning walk on Carmel beach.

Council acts wisely on Big Sur question

BY AL EISNER

I'VE GOT TO tip my hat to the Carmel City Council for acting wisely Monday night.

It voted unanimously to reject a proposed resolution that would have declared support for the "Big Sur Coalition." The coalition is trying to stave off federal intervention to preserve Big Sur.

The action was all the more remarkable because Mayor Barney Laiolo went along with the rest of the members of the council, even though he has publicly expressed his personal feeling that Big Sur could do without federal assistance. He did not allow his personal feelings to interfere with his good judgment that the organization should not be embraced by the city.

City Administrator Doug Peterson set the tone for the brief discussion when he stated that adoption of the suggested resolution would have been a "blanket endorsement" of the group's aims and ideals, and would foreclose on the city's ability to comment on the Big Sur matter on an "issue by issue basis."

THE COUNCIL MEETING had been carefully orchestrated as a media event. Television cameras were very much in evidence inside and outside of the council chambers. Members of the Coalition had obviously "tipped off" the media that a big news story was breaking.

When I climbed the stairs in front of City Hall to get into the council chambers before the meeting, I had to make my way through a small band of people carrying placards and courting television cameramen. I was able to recognize at least four or five people among the group as outspoken critics of the Coastal Commission — people who have repeatedly tried to dismantle the commission or strip it of its powers to regulate development along the California coast.

It would appear, then, that the same people who are fighting desperately to prevent the federal government from intervening in Big Sur are opposed to the policies of the Coastal Commission.

•

MANY WELL-MEANING PEOPLE have allowed themselves to be persuaded by the argument that the "feds" foul everything up, and that the future of Big Sur ought to be settled through a process guided by "local control."

The new Local Coastal Plan for the Big Sur area has been unveiled. Public debate will begin in the very near future.

Among the major recommendations in the plan is the downzoning of most of Big Sur into 320-acre, minimum-size building lots. Thus, ranchers who own, say, 1,000 acres might find themselves with three building sites instead of the 200 or more they thought they had under previous zoning.

You can bet that many of these property owners will fight tooth and nail to defeat or water down this proposal.

Some of the leaders of the group opposed to the Panetta and Cranston bills have cleverly manipulated public opinion these past several months. It's so easy to point out the mistakes the government has made. Public distrust of government is at an all-time high.

Once these people have whipped up public opposition to the proposed federal legislation, you can be darn sure they will go to work to water down the Local Coastal Plan — in the name of "local control."

Any day now, folks, you can expect these people to start their campaign to gut the Local Coastal Plan.

They are keenly aware that large sums of money are going to be needed to compensate property owners in Big Sur for devaluing or downzoning their property. Development rights and scenic easements will have to be bought. Neither the county nor the state has the funds to do the job. Only the federal government has the resources to fairly compensate property owners who will no longer be able to speculate or profit by development of their land.

So, as the controversy continues, examine the statements made by the spokesmen for the "Coalition" and the strategy will become clear.

Housing for aged

Dear Editor:

"It is better late than never," goes an old, old saying.

It is therefore praiseworthy for those Carmel officials and residents who are working for a low-cost senior citizen project in Carmel. No better use could be made of the city-owned property on Dolores Street between Fourth and Fifth.

Senior citizens are entitled to something more tangible than a nod by a politician and a pat on the back around election time. They need, for their remaining days, an assurance of a decent place to live and well within their means. They require sufficient income for these inflationary times and to be relieved of all costs of health care.

Alas! How greatly inadequately does our nation provide for its elderly. What frustration do most of them endure. How insecure are their lives.

Will it not be a sign of a good climb of the ladder of worthy civilization when a nation grants priority to such basic needs of its elderly?

May the seniors housing project soon be a reality in Carmel. And, may it not indulge in the policy of applying a ridiculous "means test" so that 80 percent to 90 percent of elderly in need of housing at very moderate rentals are turned away as "ineligible"—the prevailing policy of so-called governmental "public housing."

One must have a starvation (or close to it) petty income to be put on the usually very long waiting list for such housing. Great deal! Merely a very tiny fraction of elderly are thus housed.

Go to it, Carmel. You are on the right road, mayor and all who want to make this start of a city to house its seniors at rent well affordable. It is a step forward to prove that the considerable beauty of its city is on the way to being matched by its kindly and appreciative concern for its old folks!

Listen. Do you not hear the prayers and enthusiastic applause from senior citizens everywhere?

Don't you feel proud that your better nature exerted itself?

Land development

Dear Editor:

As landowners on the Peninsula fight for the right to develop their land, it is ironic that we are having to fight to not develop ours.

We are one of the very few families left who make all of their income from agricultural land in the Carmel Valley. We fought off the encroaching subdivisions and the resulting high taxes by putting our land into a an agricultural preserve.

Next, we had the threat of a public access road through the heart of our ranch. Now, the water company wants to put us under a reservoir.

Having served for about three years on the Zone 11 Flood District board, I am familiar with the water problems. I have a few recommendations of my own:

1. Don't flood any more land than you have to. You can replant a tree or hatch another fish, but the land under a dam is gone forever.

2. Don't fight the drilling of four new wells, rather fight for their proper management. When there is no need for extra water, these wells could be rotated so that no one area would be affected. Mitigation measures might not be necessary except during a drought.

3. Start now on your San Clemente Dam. Don't get trapped in a Corps of Engineers project or I'll guarantee you a 100-year flood of red tape. You will end up with a monster that you neither want nor need.

4. Fight the expensive Fish and Game requirements that will triple the cost of the dam. Don't expect any state or federal employees to fight the Fish and Game. They all seem to be afraid to challenge each other. No one seemed worried about the fact that the fish ladder at San Clemente was nonfunctional for several years, but now if you build a dam, they want you to create a fish heaven.
functional for several years, but now if you build a dam, they want you to crate a fish heaven.

5. Build the smallest possible dam (not for flood control) where it would do the least amount of damage (San Clemente) with the least amount of money (that probably means let Cal-Am do it). Private enterprise can still do things a lot cheaper than any local or federal agency.

Even a small water supply dam will give you a lot more flood protection than you have now.

Woman general

Dear Editor:

According to recent press releases, the Republican Platform Committee is having all sorts of misgivings over the highly controversial Equal Rights Amendment.

It would seem that for the good of the nation, all factions should consider attentively a recent statement by retired Brig. Gen. Elizabeth Hoisington, the Army's first woman general.

Quoting from the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, she said: "Ratification of the ERA would mean that by law half of U.S. combat troops would be female. Can you imagine a fighting line where every other link in the chain is a weak one? . . . Don't you think we will be the laughing stock of the world with a half-and-half Army, Navy, and Air Force?"

That's what the lady says. I don't know why she left out the Marine Corps, but you know, when you stop to think about it, she's got an important point there.

Raymond C. Wilson
San Juan Bautista

The Mayor's report:

I WAS PLEASED at the response to my request for "people input" regarding the use of city property for housing of the elderly.

You will probably remember that an underground garage was also discussed. The amount of support from the public at the City Council meeting indicated that would be a good use. There were a few people who said a garage might not be too good. I don't think all realized this type of garage would not be used on a regular all-day, in and out basis. The cars parked there would be for permanent monthly rentals, and the type of occupancy would not have the same use as, for instance, the 10-minute Post Office lot.

There is one other consideration regarding the garage, and that is the cost of improvements. When we have this figure we can then discuss the total picture.

•

THE PAST Fourth of July festivities on the beach were probably the largest assembly of people I have ever seen for this holiday.

Most people seemed to be enjoying themselves, making new friends and taking in the great show of fireworks. A good part of the celebrants cleaned up and were good citizens in all ways. It's unfortunate that such a minority of the people using our beach are responsible for the litter that's left behind and the uncontrolled use of fireworks that causes personal burns and even possible house fires.

There are also those who have little regard for the people living on Scenic Drive and who at times park their cars in ways to block traffic, play frisbee and football on the paved street and on and on. I would hope that a more cooperative feeling could exist to make a better life for all.

Hopefully, during budget session, we will be able to have more policing of the area.

•

LAST MONDAY I presented a preliminary sketch of a proposed restroom at City Hall. I am presenting another preliminary drawing of a proposed restroom for Devendorf Park. Please bear in mind these proposals are only suggestions for consideration. If the council agrees on one or both, it would be necessary to have plans drawn and then submitted to the Planning Commission for approval and put out to bid.

Hopefully, we soon will have an answer.

Smiling on—
Barney Laiolo

Eisner buys paper in San Francisco

Albert M. Eisner and Kathryn Pudenz have purchased the San Francisco Visitor News, a tabloid newspaper serving the thriving San Francisco tourist market.

Eisner, publisher of the Carmel Pine Cone, Carmel Valley Outlook and Monterey Peninsula Review, said the tabloid was bought from Warren Simmons, developer of Pier 39 in San Francisco.

The newspaper is distributed through hotels, motels and other major tourist points in San Francisco. Circulation is 100,000.

Eisner and Pudenz are the principal stockholders in Golden Gate Communications Corp., a new company formed to acquire and operate the newspaper. Eisner is chairman of the new company; Pudenz is president.

Pudenz was a partner in a graphics company and a newspaper in Santa Cruz County. A native of San Francisco, she has re-established residence in the city.

The staff of the Visitor News is working on a new, detailed street map of the downtown area. A comprehensive dining guide to San Francisco — much like the dining guide now appearing in the Monterey Peninsula Review — is also being developed.

Eisner, a resident of Carmel Valley, is president of Carmel Communications Corp., which operates the three weekly Monterey Peninsula newspapers. Formerly with the Los Angeles Times, he has a wide background in publishing, advertising and promotion.

The new company has established offices in San Francisco. The mailing address is P.O. Box 3432, San Francisco 94119. The telephone number is (415) 781-7550.

Fruit store won't replace gas station downtown

PEACHES-N-CREAM, a produce store that has been negotiating for a lease for property on San Carlos and Sixth, has apparently been notified the lease is unacceptable.

The property, owned by Jim Burgess of Carmel, had been an Arco service station.

Dick Lugo, one of three persons interested in retaining a service station at the site, said July 11 he had been informed of the decision by Burgess not to accept the offer by Peaches-N-Cream.

Another source, who asked not to be identified, said Peaches-N-Cream had been stopped "dead in their tracks."

At issue is local resistance to the produce store by factions which wish to retain a service station, and by grocers who have said privately that a new produce store might cause some of them to go out of business.

A coalition of grocers and gasoline proponents has been circulating a petition for several weeks opposing Peaches-N-Cream.

Patrick Young, owner of Peaches-N-Cream, which is based in Cupertino, was not available for comment about the apparent change of heart by Burgess.

Burgess said he had turned the matter over to his lawyer and declined comment.

Mayor Barney Laiolo said he was waiting for a call from attorney George Walker, who represents Burgess in the negotiations with Peaches-N-Cream, and would not comment.

Walker did not return the calls of a reporter seeking information on Peaches-N-Cream.

Lugo, owner of Lugo's Shell service station in Carmel, said he and two others are interested in maintaining a service station, probably an Arco, on the Burgess property.

Charles Marcolli, who ran the Arco service station for many years, retired in May without picking up his option to continue doing business there.

"It was the economics of the situation," Lugo said. "The numbers just aren't there.

"I pay twice the rent in Carmel that a service station owner pays in Pacific Grove."

Lugo said, "Some of the people who have signed the petition requesting that a service station be retained on the Burgess property buy their gasoline outside Carmel."

There are four service stations in Carmel. Some of them are in danger of closing if there isn't support from local residents, Lugo said.

Letter from Gwen

From "The Other Side of the Grapestake Fence."

Last week, I was sick and lay in bed.

I had two pillows at my head and a 24-inch glass eye in front of me. The latter I had delivered because I was told I would be flat on my back for at least two weeks (a muscle spasm is something everyone should avoid).

I watched game shows, talk shows, soap operas (all geared to the mentality of a 3-year-old) and thousands of commercials. They say seeing is believing. Not so.

I could not believe what was before my eyes. I saw grown women squeezing toilet paper (apparently an irresistible urge) in the middle of a supermarket, monsters appearing from nowhere to clean out a clogged kitchen drain, a bad, really awful imitation of Teddy Roosevelt touting paper towels, E.G. Marshall popping a stomach antacid in the breast pocket of his Brooks Brothers suit (doesn't everyone?), and little men sailing in the waters of the commode tanks. I saw people who carry denture cleaner in their purses and hip pockets just in case they eat blueberries, and a vegetable truck that just happens to have ready-made salad dressing on the truck and will serve your favorite right there in the middle of the street.

But the piece de resistance was seeing Cathy Rigby (a former Olympic medal-winner) advertising a feminine product that so shocked and repelled me I couldn't believe what I was hearing. Had the doctor (when he came that evening) not told me I was as good as new and could be up and about again, the shoes that were beside my bed would have most certainly gone through that glass eye instead of on my feet the next day.

Mediocrity is one thing, but bad taste is something else again.

One-liners to:

David Hughes—We miss you.

The Forestry Commission—Stand your ground on the Segal tree issue.

The Mayor—Take off your blinders.

Terrence Farrell—Your new record is fantastic.

Planning Commission—Congratulations.

Mike Brown—You're come a long way, Baby.

Frank Lloyd—Watch out for the bodies that will be coming to "throw themselves" on the mercy of the council.

Jim Bajari—Welcome, welcome, welcome. (I simply refuse to say aboard).

Bernard Anderson—"The best laid plans of mice and men . . . etc., etc.

Howard Brunn—If I took up a collection to buy the plane tickets, do you suppose you could leave the first two weeks of every month?

Library Board—You are getting way too big for your britches.

The Village:

More Hacienda liquor license suits threatened

By BOB BATES

THE STATE Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control in Sacramento has responded to a protest by the City of Carmel July 2 concerning the purchase of a liquor license by Steve McComb, owner of the Hacienda del Sol Mexican Restaurant in Carmel.

McComb bought the license from people in Monterey June 2.

The city had 30 days in which to file a protest with the ABC.

Although the letter of protest (dated June 25) drafted by City Attorney George Brehmer was received by the ABC in Salinas June 30, two days before the deadline, McComb said it was not received by the Hearing and Legal Department of the ABC in Sacramento until July 2—31 days after he bought the license. That may be significant in litigation, he said.

"I am prepared to sue the city if I must," McComb said. "I have just put too much time and energy into this to back out now."

At the crux of the controversy between McComb and city officials is a zoning ordinance that prohibits the sale of hard liquor at the restaurant.

McComb has a license to serve wine and beer in conjunction with food.

Brehmer's letter, which is signed by City Administrator Douglas Peterson, objects to the purchase of a full-liquor license by McComb because the Hacienda entrance is within 100 feet of an area zoned residential and would cause traffic problems if the license is issued to McComb.

"Carmel is also unique in that it has very few sidewalks and very few streetlights and an extremely large number of elderly people," the letter continues, "must walk along the streets, unlighted, at night."

A high city official, who asked not to be identified, called the logic of the letter "weak" and "without meat."

Issuance of the license would tend to create a law enforcement problem, the letter said.

'Carmel is also unique in that is has very few sidewalks and very few streetlights and an extremely large number of elderly people must walk along the streets, unlighted, at night.'

"This is so because the sales at eating and drinking establishments in the city have greatly increased in the past six years and police problems have risen accordingly," the letter said.

•

STATE BOARD of Equalization records show $6,851,000 worth of taxable transactions for eating and drinking establishments in Carmel in 1974, and $16,046,000 in 1979.

Drunk driving arrests increased from 20 to 232 in the same period in Carmel, the letter states.

That trend has been detrimental to the zoning objective and of maintaining a residential community with "unique serenity and charm," the letter said.

The license should not be issued because the applicant is operating the business under a permit that contains a condition that only beer and wine be sold, according to the letter, and that condition was not appealed to the City Council and now it is too late.

"Right now, we are waiting for a hearing date," Brehmer said. "I have not heard back from the Alcohol Control Board as yet."

McComb said the presumption that issuing a liquor license to the Hacienda would increase law enforcement problems was not based on fact.

"In 1974, nobody was arrested for drunk driving in Carmel. The police either took them home or put them in a cab for their hotel," he said.

"It has only been in recent years that the police began making arrests for drunk driving here."

•

THERE HAS NOT been a change in (police policy) concerning drunk drivers," Police Chief William Ellis said.

"We have been making more arrests the past two years in accordance with the initiation of a safety program in 1978 for the protection of the public. Of course, drunken driving arrests have increased dramatically statewide.

"The Highway Patrol, especially, has increased the number of drunk driving arrests it has been making."

If McComb is denied a liquor license based on the city protest, he can appeal that decision.

"If McComb decides to sue the city," Brehmer said, "we will have to litigate, unless some reasonable compromise can be reached."

Gardeners may raise rates, drop customers

FEES CHARGED by gardeners will increase and some of their customers in Carmel will be dropped if a noise abatement law banning the use of powered leaf blowers is not modified, according to the president of the Monterey Peninsula Landscape Gardeners Association.

In a presentation to the City Council Monday (July 14) David Watkins, president of the association, said the time required to rake leaves instead of using motorized leaf blowers would drive up fees to residents and mean some clients would be dropped if power blowers are not permitted here.

"With the use of blowers, leaf removal only requires about 25 percent of the gardener's time," Watkins said. "Without the use of the blowers, up to 75 percent of the gardener's time is spent in the removal of leaves."

The controversy over power leaf blowers has been an issue since the passage of an ordinance in May that restricts noise. Power leaf blowers are banned altogether.

The gardeners' association has been before the council three times to have that portion of the law amended. Gardeners say it is impossible to do a proper job of gardening without devices such as power blowers.

•

COUNCILMAN FRANK LLOYD argued that the blowers are not vital to the industry, and that gardeners did quite well with rake and broom for years.

"Creative people who are attempting to work early in the morning are distracted by the noise from these blowers as well," Lloyd said.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold read a letter she had received from a resident deploring the use of power blowers. She did not name the resident. The letter urged the City Council to "stand firm" against power blowers.

Other gardeners at the meeting included David Conneau, a former Carmel resident, who is a gardener, although he does not do business here.

"Carmel is thought of as a community of the rich," he said, "but there are also people here on small incomes, or fixed incomes, who are also elderly. "Some people get $100 a garden here, while others can afford only $50.

"As a businessman, I cannot afford to operate at a loss."

The quaintness of Carmel will deteriorate without the services of professional gardeners, he added.

Mayor Barney Laiolo was in favor of softening the ordinance.

"These people (gardeners) have to work for a living," he said.

City won't back Big Sur group to fight Uncle Sam

SUPPORTERS OF THE BIG SUR Coalition, a group of conservation organizations claiming nationwide membership, jammed Carmel City Council Chambers Monday, July 14 hoping to add Carmel to its list of backers.

The group went away empty after a brief discussion by the council and a polite refusal by the mayor to lend the name of the city to the coalition roster.

"I just don't think it would be right to involve the city in a cause that does not affect Carmel," Mayor Barney Laiolo said.

The objective of the coalition, according to James Josoff, general chairman of Friends of the Big Sur Coast, is to support the concept that there is no need to increase the level of federal land ownership, management or control in the Big Sur area.

"The Big Sur is presently absolutely protected from over-development by the California Coastal Act of 1976, the Monterey County zoning and design restrictions and the physical constraints of the land itself," Josoff said in a letter to Laiolo dated June 12.

"The area is presently serving three million visitors a year and is doing so with a minimal use of governmental funds.

"A federal designation of this area would involve the expenditure of hundreds of millions of tax dollars.

"This would lead to the over-development everyone is most anxious to prevent, due to the increase in visitors and the demand for public facilities."

How do you spell R-E-L-I-E-F?

MAYOR BARNEY Laiolo has yet another idea to provide public restrooms in Carmel.

"We'll call 'em pay bushes," the mayor quipped.

Laiolo presented a proposal to the City Council Monday (July 14) for restrooms to be built at Devendorf Park near the bus stop on Sixth.

"I don't care whether they are two-holers or three-holers," Laiolo told the council.

"Boy, things are really coming to a head in Carmel," Councilman Frank Lloyd interjected.

"I can see the HEADlines now," City Administrator Douglas Peterson offered.

"Whether they are two-holers or three-holers, I think it is a great idea," Councilwoman Helen Arnold told Laiolo.

"I would recommend a two-holer each (for men and women).

"Then we won't need them at Piccadilly (Nursery)."

"Well, I'm doing it strictly out of love," the mayor effused.

During the July 7 council meeting, Laiolo proposed that public toilets be installed near a driveway at City Hall.

"The water and pipes are already there," the mayor said. "We won't be putting a load on the city."

Laiolo pointed out that the public restrooms at the upper level of Carmel Plaza were installed with help from the city, which provided oversized water pipes.

Segal takes a break in fight over tree

BARNET SEGAL has given up — for now — attempts to have an old pine tree removed from his vacant lot near Seventh and Monte Verde.

Segal wants to build a house. He says the tree is dead and should be removed. The city says it is alive and should remain.

"I've done a lot of good for this town," Segal told the Pine Cone.

He said the city's refusal to let him remove the tree is "being done for spite against me."

Segal was president of the former Carmel Savings and Loan Association, was president of the Carmel Board of Realtors and was a developer in the city 45 years.

City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio said he took samples of the tree several months ago and found it to be alive.

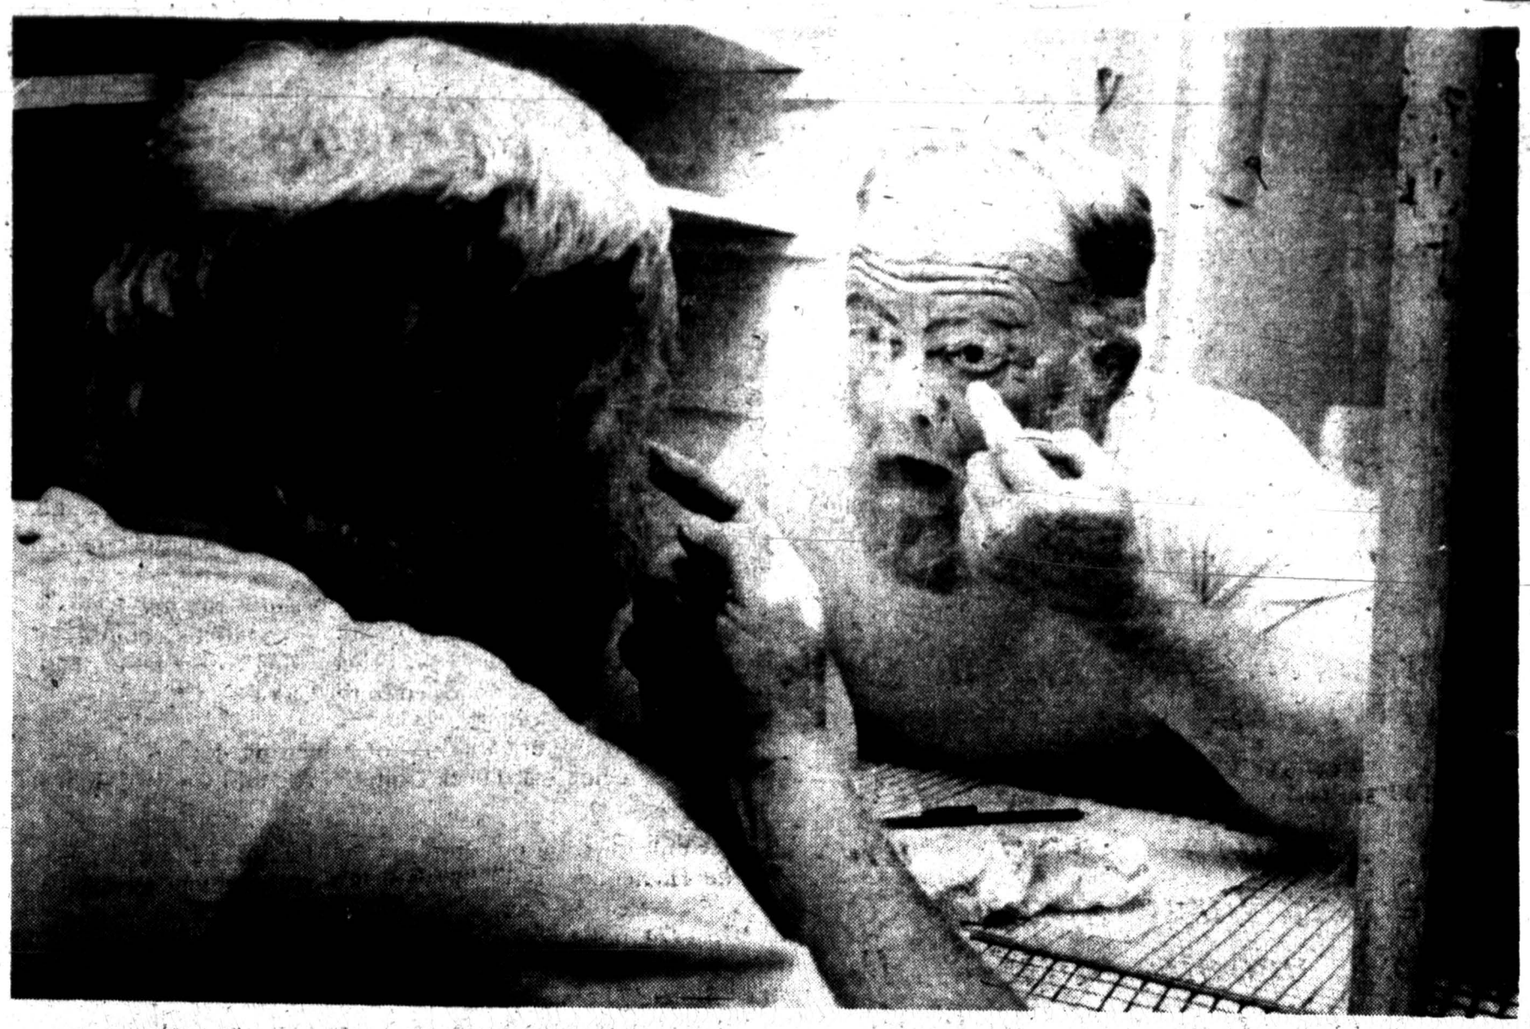
Segal said he will revive his fight to remove the tree when "the climate's right." He said he wants to "correct errors in city ordinances."

He said, "After spending almost two years after applying for a building permit to build a home on my vacant lot, I am now being asked for a third time to again apply to an employee of the Forestry Commission for a permit to remove a tree in the middle of my lot, which would interfere with my legitimate plans for a home.

"The tree in question has a dozen dead limbs on one side due to a fire which completely destroyed a home, formerly located at the site.

"I am tired of being whipsawed . . . by meaningles legal bafflegab, so I am therefore withdrawing my application, since a fair deal is not in prospect."

Segal said he had many suggestions on poisoning the tree, but "that's not my way of doing things."



ACTOR BILL LOGAN prepares for his role in Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, now playing at the outdoor Forest Theater in Carmel. The play alternates weekends with Hamlet. Logan appears in both productions. The rustic outdoor theater makes a nice setting for the plays, but theater-goers are advised to bring sweaters for the sometimes chilly evenings.

Council advances garbage pact

By BOB BATES

A SPEEDY CARMEL City Council whizzed through its agenda in less than two hours Monday, July 14, at a meeting punctuated with eloquent debate, appeals by a gardeners' association and a conservationist coalition, and winding up with one of the funniest "council comments" sessions on record.

An ordinance extending a city contract with Roscelli Corp. for garbage collection for 10 years had its first reading.

The contract held by the company would have expired July 1, 1981.

The extension of the contract by the council does away with bidding for garbage collection.

The extension was granted at the request of Roscelli so the company can expand.

The ordinance will face a seconding reading Aug. 4. If approved then, it will become law in 30 days.

•

THE REORGANIZATION of the Building and Construction Board of Appeals, which deals with construction code appeals and abatement of dangerous buildings, was approved by the council.

Mayor Barney Laiolo said he would present names to be considered for appointment to the board in a week or so.

The board, which meets only when called upon, has ruled on only one appeal in several years, according to Laiolo. The board includes an architect, a civil or structural engineer, a general contractor and a layman. Three alternates are also to be appointed.

The board has become idle due to lack of interest by residents in serving, deaths of appointees or members leaving Carmel.

No residency requirement exists for selection to the board.

City budget estimate is lowered

THE CARMEL CITY BUDGET for fiscal 1980-81 will fall short of the $4.4 million temporary budget approved by the City Council June 9, according to city Administrator Douglas Peterson.

The new budget will probably cost taxpayers $3.5 million to $4 million, he said.

The budget for 1979-80, was $3.5 million.

The council approved a temporary budget of $4.4 million June 9 to continue city services and pay expenses.

A 10 percent raise for employees, effective July 1, will increase last year's $1.8 million personal service costs to about $2 million, Peterson said.

The $1.2 million budgeted for materials and services last year will remain about the same, he said.

Capital outlays of $100,000 for 1979-80 will also be about the same for 1980-81, Peterson added.

"I have met with department heads and am pulling together the final figures," Peterson said.

He would not indicate when the budget will be complete.

Suit challenges condominiums in CV Village

By STEVE HELLMAN

A LAWSUIT has been filed against the Monterey County Board of Supervisors challenging its approval of the 38-unit White Oak condominium project in Carmel Valley Village.

Attorney Richard Rosenthal of Carmel Valley filed the suit last week in Monterey County Superior Court for his wife, Cathy, and George T.C. Smith on behalf of other unnamed Valley residents.

The suit charges that the county lacked an adequate General Plan when the supervisors granted Mrs. Barbara Mark of Carmel Valley a use permit and tentative subdivision map for the project Jan. 22.

It asks that the supervisors set aside the use permit and tentative map, and that the court issue a permanent injunction halting the project until objections raised by the suit are resolved.

Causes of action presented by Rosenthal are:

• The county lacked an adequate General Plan from May 1979 to January 1980 when several discretionary decisions were made on the project by the county Planning Commission and supervisors.

Rosenthal charges in his 15-page brief a litany of inadequacies in each of the nine elements of the county General Plan.

He charges that the supervisors' approval of the use permit and tentative map without proper findings and an adequate General Plan was "arbitrary and capricious and an abuse of discretion and not in accordance with law."

(Rosenthal represented Harry Holt of Carmel in another suit against the Carmel Valley Ranch development. That suit, which attacked the supervisors' approval of the development on grounds that the county General Plan was inadequate, was dismissed in Monterey County Superior Court last year, and is on appeal.)

(The county is currently revising its General Plan to bring it into conformity with law; the revision is expected to take three years.)

• No findings were issued by the supervisors in relationship to the project's consistency with the county General Plan.

• The project is inconsistent with the 1961 Carmel Valley Master Plan, which designates the property for commercial and not residential use.

The 1961 Master Plan is that portion of the county General Plan which is applicable to the Valley, and Mrs. Mark's property.

The new Carmel Valley Master Plan, which designates her property for some residential development, has been ruled invalid in Monterey County Superior Court until an Environmental Impact Report is prepared for it.

• Reclassification of zoning to allow the residential development amounts to a de facto amendment to the county General Plan.

Richard Rosenthal

George T.C. Smith

ROSENTHAL maintains that the reclassification would be inconsistent with the 1961 Carmel Valley Master Plan, and would therefore require an amendment to the Master Plan, a condition that the county did not attach to the use permit.

The Mark family property and several development proposals for it have been caught up in litigation and resident opposition since 1973.

Mrs. Mark has fought to win approval for a project since she inherited the property from her mother, the late Mrs. Marion Wilson. She has insisted that a development is needed to pay steep inheritance taxes. The property is on Carmel Valley Road between Esquiline and Paso Hondo.

Her first development proposal was for a 100-unit hotel and tennis resort.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association successfully challenged the supervisors' decision in July 1977 to grant a use permit for the hotel and tennis resort without an environmental impact report.

Mrs. Mark later changed her plans and asked for 55 condominium units. The county Planning Commission in May 1979 recommended approval of the condominium plan on the condition that she trim the project to 46 units. The commission later revised the condition to 40 units.

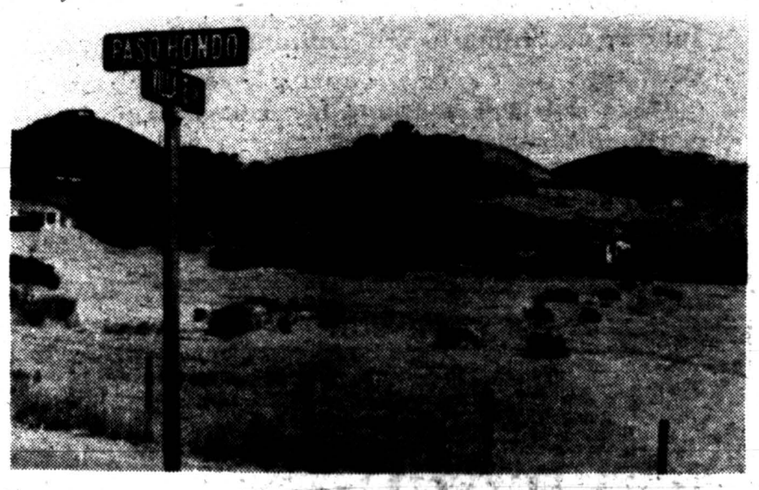
The supervisors on July 31, 1979, granted final approval for the 40-unit condominium project.

A survey in October showed that the property, thought to be 9.2 acres, was actually 8.1 acres.

The Planning Commission determined in November that the tentative map was still valid and consistent despite the discrepancy in acreage.

CVPOA appealed the commission's decision to the supervisors, who granted the appeal by reducing the number of units from 40 to 38.

Rosenthal said in his brief that Mrs. Mark sold the property on Nov. 15 to her architect, Jerry Romis of Carmel Valley, who then transferred it into a limited partnership.



The condominiums are planned on this land.

Tax break is offered to keep Valley land open

By STEVE HELLMAN

A TRUST IS PLANNED that would acquire and preserve Carmel Valley land in open space by offering tax benefits as an alternative to development.

Working to form the trust are Ty Ebright, a Carmel estate and financial consultant; Alexander Henson, a Carmel lawyer and Valley resident, and Virginia Merz, a Carmel resident.

Ebright said the Carmel Valley land trust would be established like the Big Sur Land Trust, which has run successfully for four years.

The trust would be a nonprofit organization, he said, and run by a board of directors chosen by residents, he said.

It would accept land donations through a variety of transactions, and in exchange the landowner would get an immediate income tax deduction and reduced estate and inheritance taxes, he said.

"It is purely voluntary for the landowner," Ebright said. The landowner chooses to donate his land, the donation is tailored to his needs and his family can retain use of the land until death of the last heir who was alive at the time of the transaction.

At that time, the land reverts to "public good," usually park space, open space with public access, or it remains in agricultural use. All development rights to the land are relinquished, and the land trust also cannot develop the land.

"Chief purpose of the trust is to provide an alternative to development, and also provide the landowner with some form of financial gain from his donation," Ebright said.

While the idea of a Carmel Valley land trust sounds ideal for this area where many residents are concerned about preserving open space, Ebright said people are not rushing to help form it.

EBRIGHT said a meeting at his home May 22 drew 45 people, but so far only five have shown interest and only three of them have offered assistance in forming the trust.

"This thing isn't going over like a gold balloon," he said last week. "We don't have people standing in line, although everyone you talk to thinks it's a great idea for the Valley."

The owner of a one-acre parcel, for example, could realize an annual income tax savings of $4,200, and also avoid capital gains taxes on the land if it is donated to a land trust, Ebright said. The acre being donated could be worth $100,000, which is near average for Carmel Valley, Ebright said. The tax deduction is based on the fair market value of the land.

The landowner can deduct up to 30 percent of his adjusted gross income in any one year. With an annual income of $40,000, for example, the first year deduction could be $12,100 against taxable income, Ebright said. If the landowner is in a 35 percent tax bracket, the reduction in income tax would be $4,200. That deduction can be carried for five years.

•

ADVANTAGES are also available to developers.

On a 50-acre parcel, for example, 30 acres could be donated to the land trust and the other 20 acres developed.

"The developer achieves tax benefits from the donation, and guarantees open space for the homes," Ebright said.

"If you want to completely develop your land or just build a home, the land trust option stinks," Ebright said. "But if you want to retain the integrity of your land and also make more efficient use of money, it's great," he said.

•

The initial 541 acres were sold and donated to the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District in 1975 by the late William Garland II. The Condon family donated and sold 636 acres this year to the district, adding Garzas Canyon and surrounding area to the park.

The expected addition of 530 acres from the de Dampierre family would swell the park to 1,727 acres, and extend it from Robinson Canyon Road at Mid-Valley to Robles Del Rio, behind Carmel Valley Village.

The Trust for Public Land in San Francisco is handling the transaction.

The de Dampierre family intends to retain only 84 acres, on which 24 lots are proposed.

Henson noted that the donation to a land trust can be very flexible for the landowner.

"The owner donates an interest in his land," Henson said. "It may be less than the actual title, or just an easement."

The owner can retain a life estate on the land, which allows him to continue using it or living on it until his death. The life estate can also be in the name of his children, Henson said, which keeps the land in the family until death of the last heir that was alive at the time of the donation.

"The beauty of the land trust is that it can tailor any kind of property donation to meet the individual needs," he said.

Jennie Gerard, a director of the Trust for Public Land, explained the purpose, scope and benefits of the land trust at the meeting in Ebright's home.

She said the land trust either holds the land itself, or in the case of the de Dampierre land, turns it over to a public agency.

Eventually, the land reverts to the public good, in most cases park space or open space with public access, she said.

If the land is in agricultural use, it can remain so in perpetuity and not be made open to the public, she said.

CVPOA board is split on budget cut

CONCERN OVER a proposed letter urging cuts amounting to $10 million or more in the proposed Monterey County 1980-81 budget split the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association board of directors at its monthly meeting Wednesday, July 9, at Los Laureles Lodge.

Lacking a majority vote of the board, the letter proposed by Jack Sassard, CVPOA president, was tabled after extensive discussion.

The letter, to be sent to members of the Board of Supervisors, objected to the proposed budget's 10.7 percent increase in spending and the addition of 55 employees. It urged bringing spending levels below the 1979-80 county budget, reducing welfare costs by eliminating the possibility of duplication or fraud and by requiring welfare recipients to perform needed public services in return for welfare payments.

Such cuts, the letter declared, could be made and essential services, including fire protection where user fees were not approved by voters in June, could still be provided.

In other business, the CVPOA board paid complimentary tribute to the water resources workshops being sponsored for the public by California American Water Co. and the Water Management District.

Membership committee chairmen Lillian Stevens and Betty Graef reported that paid up members of the CVPOA now total 1,040, the highest membership in the history of the organization.

The board heard a report by Don Graef on traffic plans being considered by county supervisors for the Carmel Valley Ranch development to improve the intersection at Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads. Board members decided to delay taking a further stand.

A decision as to whether the CVPOA will support plans to build an additional dam for improving Carmel Valley's water supply will be taken at a future meeting, the board decided.

The next meeting of the board will be held Wednesday, Aug. 13, at 7:45 p.m.

Speed limit debated

WHEN IS a legal speed limit not a legal speed limit?

Carmel City Council moved unanimously Monday (July 14) to enact an ordinance rescinding a 30 mph speed limit on Rio Road that has been posted as 25 mph for more than a year.

It seems the previous City Council neglected to pass into law the 25 mph limit along Rio Road between Junipero and the south end of the city, although the street has been posted for 25 mph as the result of a motion by the City Council March 12, 1979.

The Municipal Code should have been changed then, according to City Administrator Douglas Peterson.

Barracudas top Watsonville

THE CARMEL BARRACUDA Swim Team trounced the Watsonville Swim Team 746-450 at the Carmel High School pool Saturday, July 12.

Outstanding swimmers were Hailey and Tanya Franke, 10-year-old twins from Carmel Valley, both of whom took first in each of their four events, and Jeff Lewis, who took first in each of the four events he swam.

Sam Hardasson, one of three new Barracudas from Iceland, took first in all of his events in the 13-14 boy's division.

HAVING JUST done 75 laps at the Carmel High School pool, Cassie Brophy, 8, has a drink and waits to learn how much money her efforts contributed. About 140 other youngsters swam and dove at the high school and Carmel Valley Community Center pools. Each swimmer had one or more sponsors who pledged to contribute a given amount of money for each lap or dive.

JANE OLIN KEEPS a tally for Carmel Valley swimmers at the Carmel Valley pool. The totals were impressive: with 13,500 laps and 1,000 dives, $8,750 was raised to support the Barracudas Swim and Dive Team which is self-supporting.

THE VERY TIP OF THE HIGH board may seem like a hard place to concentrate, but that's just what Holly Powell, 8, is doing as she prepares to take another dive.

The scene at the Carmel High School pool and the pool at the Carmel Valley Community Center was a busy one Sunday, July 13, as 140 members and friends of the Carmel Barracudas Swim and Dive team plowed through the water to raise money. The third annual Waterama and Divathon raised more than $8,750 for the team, which has had to become self-supporting. Swimmers and divers each found sponsors who pledged to donate a given amount based on the number of laps swum or dives made.

ONE OF THE MOST DETERMINED SWIMMERS is Ali Voskay, 14, churning away at the Carmel Valley Community Center pool. The third annual Waterama and Divathon was held Sunday, July 13.

Water conservation program is started

A SUMMER CAMPAIGN to conserve water on the Monterey Peninsula has been launched by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, according to an announcement by Bruce Buel, general manager.

"The summer is the period of peak demand for water," Buel said, "and also the time when we normally have the least water available. Despite the fact that we have enjoyed a wet winter, water conservation on a reasonable level should be practiced year 'round or we may run short of water in little more than a decade."

An Information Center at the district office in Monterey offers water conservation literature free. A Speakers' Bureau will offer programs on water-related subjects.

The district bases the need for its program on historical data:

"From the beginning of its recorded history, the State of California has alternated between droughts and moderate to heavy rainfall periods. The Monterey Peninsula has had four droughts in its recorded history of 77 years. The possibility of a drought occurring in any given year is a strong one," Buel said.

The area served by MPWMD averages 14 to 22 inches of rain yearly. Ten or fewer inches constitute a dry year. In one such year, without normal surface flows, the aquifer does not become fully recharged, Buel said. Two dry years in a row use up much of the water in the dam reservoirs, drawing heavily on the aquifer and depleting its reserve buffer of water, he said.

Current district projections indicate that by the year 1993, demand will exceed this estimated supply, and the Peninsula is expected to have a serious water supply problem, Buel said.

Among reasons for conserving water is that development of new water sources becomes increasingly costly each day, Buel said.

The district points out that saving water saves energy used in pumping it from the aquifers; decreases sewage flows, thus reducing waste treatment costs and energy use, and can lessen the impact of increased water rates.

School district plans to sell or lease land

THREE UNDEVELOPED school sites in the Carmel Unified School District have been appraised, and sale or lease of the sites is planned.

An advisory committee reported to the Board of Education last week that the three sites were appraised at a total of $1.3 million by two Carmel Valley real estate companies. The committee recommended that the sites be sold, although did not suggest selling prices.

The trustees postponed action on the recommendations, and directed Superintendent William Rand and Business Manager Robert Zampatti to prepare a report on which sites should be sold and at what price.

The sites being considered for sale are a 20-acre parcel on Scarlett Road; 10 acres known as the Metz property about a half mile east of Carmel Valley Village, and the 10-acre Holt property west of Robinson Canyon Road and south of the Carmel River.

Sale of the Metz and Holt sites was approved by trustees last January to help finance $900,000 in renovations at Carmel High School.

Based on the current state of the real estate market, projected enrollment for the school district and consideration of its holding excess assets, the advisory committee recommended going ahead with the land sales.

Rand said after the meeting that he and Zampatti will investigate the cost of the bidding process to offer the land for sale.

"The board will have to decide whether to go above or below the appraisal in offering the sites for sale," Rand said.

He added, "I don't see us selling all three pieces at once.

"We'll probably sell one and get matching funds from the state for the high school renovations."

Opposition won't stop school bus fees

OFFICIALS OF CARMEL SCHOOLS say bus fees are going to be levied despite public opposition and the potential impact on enrollment.

The Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District voted unanimously last week to adopt a policy for annual bus fees.

The policy, which calls for a charge of $50 per student and $125 maximum per family, will be discussed at a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. July 22 in Room 2 at Carmel High School.

The proposed fees, estimated to raise $47,500, are needed to help the financially-strapped school district. The fees are proposed as a trade-off for restoring the six-period day at Middle School, along with curriculum and other educational programs.

Trustee Barbara Sanford said of the bus fees after the meeting, "I don't know if we have any other way to go."

Faced with income losses since Proposition 13 and a depleted reserve fund, she said the district has to come up with new income to sustain itself.

The bus fee policy follows a policy adopted last year charging students $25 each for after-school athletics, with a maximum fee of $100 per family.

•

TRUSTEES said they had avoided bus fees because they worried that parents expect free busing and would remove children from the district, placing them in private schools.

Mrs. Sanford debunked the concerns over losing enrollment, saying that had not happened after the athletics fee was instituted. She said restoring the six-period day at Carmel Middle School will help enrollment.

State funding for the district is based on the average daily attendance. Declining enrollment in the district has contributed to its financial problems.

The athletics fee was initially proposed at $75 a student, and only after an outcry from parents, gym teachers and students did trustees agree to approve the $25 fee.

Mrs. Sanford said, however, that she did not expect the trustees to lower the bus fee.

Bus fees are expected to finance about one-sixth of the district's $300,000 transportation budget. Mrs. Sanford said it is not realistic to charge a lower fee.

•

SUPERINTENDENT William Rand acknowledged that the athletics fee was lowered, but added: "The trustees stayed with the principle that some fee was needed to sustain athletics."

Rather than eliminate busing or use Monterey Peninsula Transit buses—two alternatives that were considered and rejected—the district administration supports the imposition of a fee, he said.

"If the school board does not charge a bus fee," Rand said, "we'll have to cut programs. We've already had to make across-the-board cuts in programs, and then work to restore six periods at the Middle School. The fee seems necessary at this point."

He said that in the last two years—since Proposition 13—school districts have been turning to bus fees.

Additional money for transportation is not expected from the state, Rand added.

"Until the state funds us more completely, we're going to have to charge for these things," he said.

A transportation advisory committee which recommended the bus fees estimated that 1,000 students would be paying, with $50 collected from 900 students and $25 collected from another 100. Families would have to pay $50 each for the first two children and $25 for all others.

•

HANDICAPPED students and those qualifying for the free lunch program will be exempt from the fees.

Passes will be issued to all exempt children and those paying the fees. The passes will be sold during the first two weeks of school, during which students can ride free. Thereafter, students will not be able to board a bus without a pass.

Students who move after the third week of school to a home where transportation is required would pay a reduced fee. It would be pro-rated according to the days remaining in the school year, from $10 to $40. Reduced-fee passes will not be sold when there are more than 140 days left in the school year.

The fees will not affect district reimbursement from the state for transportation costs, a subsidy estimated to be $64,000 this year, officials said.

Trustees decided not to eliminate several short routes to save money.

The routes had been established for children's safety to avoid crossing busy roads or walking long distances to other bus stops.

Mrs. Parker, Where Are You?

In 1914, the artist Armin Hansen arrived in Monterey with a lot more talent than money. He was able to stay because Mrs. Parker, wife of the fire chief, game him workspace for the price of one painting per year.

Hansen fathered a glorious age of artistic striving and awareness that added greatly to Carmel's reputation as a creative center.

Tom Pemberton has arrived here now. He does museum quality romantic bronze sculptures and would gladly trade sculpture (plus cash?) for a suitable studio.

Supervisors find money for fire districts

By STEVE HELLMAN

RELAXING A get-tough policy adopted only last February, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday (July 15) to provide bailout money to county fire protection districts.

Supervisors voted unanimously to amend their policy that "Special District Augmentation Funds" would not be available to fire districts that failed to adopt user fees.

By a 3-2 vote, the supervisors also set a $1 million ceiling on bailout money that will be distributed to 13 fire districts, covering the unincorporated county territory.

Bailout money was assured to 11 fire districts which had failed June 3 to vote for user fees, including the Carmel Valley, Mid-Carmel Valley and Carmel Highlands fire districts, and the three County Service Areas covering Pebble Beach, the mouth of the Valley and Aguajito area.

Fire district officials asked for the bailout money to avoid massive layoffs until they try again in November to win voter approval for user fees.

In setting aside more than half the augmentation fund for the fire districts, supervisors insisted that it was only meant as temporary relief this year.

The supervisors, backed by County Administrator Richard Andrews, the county counsel and other administrative staff, reaffirmed their stand that the county is not required to provide fire protection services for buildings and that residents will either have to adopt user fees or settle for significantly reduced fire protection.

The Special District Augmentation Fund is expected to contain $1.7 million this year. Andrews said requests for bailout money from special districts is expected to be more than $4 million.

ADDITIONAL MONEY for the fire districts will mean little or no money for lower priority districts, including parks, cemeteries and others, he said.

'If we again fail to approve user fees, residents will have to bite the bullet . . .'

The supervisors assured that money would be available to the county library system, mosquito abatement district and county Flood Control and Water Conservation District.

Andrews had advised in his report that those districts do not have the authority to levy user fees, nor do they have other funding sources.

Supervisors will hold a public hearing in August to distribute the Special District Augmentation Fund.

Supervisor Sam Farr suggested the $1 million ceiling on bailout funds for the fire districts, insisting that a ceiling was needed to prevent layoffs and other cuts that might not be necessary later.

"If the fire districts can win approval for user fees in November," he said, "then we can prevent layoffs now by providing bailout money."

SUPERVISOR BARBARA SHIPNUCK opposed setting an amount on the fire district bailout. It would be unfair, she said, to the other districts that are competing for the money.

"I don't want people to assume the board is stepping in with money for the fire districts after fees were defeated," she said.

County Fire Marshal Tom Perkins said every fire district is cutting back services, and he assured that the districts will trim their budgets to a minimum and come to the supervisors in August with minimum requests for bailout money.

He said the fire districts stood to receive only one-third of their budget this year from regular property tax revenue, which is distributed through the county general fund.

"Unless we receive bailout money in the next six months," Perkins said, "from 53 to 60 firemen will be laid off in this county."

He said the fire districts will be working hard until the Nov. 4 election to convince voters of the need for user fees.

"If we again fail to approve user fees, residents will have to bite the bullet and accept the consequences with a reduction in fire protection services," he said.

Since user fees were defeated June 3, Perkins said 15 firemen have been transferred from jobs here to fire districts outside Monterey County.

California sea urchin is in trouble

By BETTY S. DAVIS

SEA OTTERS satisfy their appetites by selecting prey from among 45 different invertebrates, regulating sizes and numbers of marine grazers such as sea urchins and abalones and recycling organic nutrients back into the environment.

Humans, on the other hand, plunder marine habitats, extirpating individual prey species without regard to the impacts of such selective depletion on natural communities.

Relationships among organisms in heavily-fished habitats have not received much consideration by fishery managers. Outside the otter's range in California (Santa Barbara, the Channel Islands and southward) humans continue to exploit kelp forests for sea urchins, abalones, spiny lobsters, crabs and fish — and harvest the kelp itself for pharmaceuticals, food additives, and industrial chemicals — with little regard for possible long-term ecological consequences.

One such kelp-based enterprise in southern California, the red sea urchin fishery, illustrates much of what is wrong with current fishery management practices that tend to focus on each species in isolation, ignoring interactions among different organisms and postponing timely development of fishery regulations.

Recent findings about the life and times of California red and purple sea urchins, and their associates, in a fishery formerly "managed" by sea otters — now exploited by humans — are revealing:

•

THE SEA URCHIN, a spiny relative of starfishes and sand dollars, evolved millions of years ago, populating virtually every ocean on earth. Its primary predator in the Eastern Pacific, the sea otter, entered the ocean about 3 million years ago and no doubt soon discovered the joys of urchin gonads. More recently, man in the Mediterranean and Japan began to relish urchin roe as a great delicacy.

Some 80 years ago in California, biologists first documented how life begins ("fertilization") using purple sea urchin eggs and sperm, and since then marine stations and universities world-wide pursue the mysteries of cellular biology using this convenient research material. So, besides being prime otter fodder for millions of years, the lowly sea urchin has recently become useful to humans.

What have the consequences of man's activities meant to sea urchins and their briny associates along our shores?

Growing evidence suggests that after sea otters were hunted to near extinction by fur traders along the rim of the Eastern Pacific in the 18th and 19th centuries, sea urchins and abalones — relieved of a major marine predator — proliferated enormously, vying for space and food in coastal kelp forests and forming the basis for shell fisheries later exploited by modern man. Eventually the kelp beds, over-grazed by these large herbivores, became reduced in extent and modified in algal composition.

With the gradual return of sea otters along the central California coast and Aleutian Islands, control of urchins and other herbivores in these areas was reinstituted and kelp beds occupied by otters have gradually taken on new aspects — expanding in size and extent, shifting in algal composition, and sheltering a more diverse assortment of organisms.

RESEARCH INDICATES that urchins and abalones in kelp forests compete for space and food, feeding on drift kelp detritus when available, but on kelp holdfasts if necessary. Prior to 1971, excessive human fishing for abalones in areas without otters selectively reduced abalone populations to the point where the more rapidly-growing (uncontrolled) urchins were able to move in and multiply, taking advantage of vacated space and food resources.

The urchin population boom in such areas was further enhanced by the removal of spiny lobsters and a fish, the California sheephead — important predators of sea urchins but also important prey for fishermen. As the runaway urchin populations in certain southern California areas encroached on kelp forests, the drift kelp supply became insufficient to supply their needs and urchins began grazing on kelp holdfasts, severing these anchoring structures and ultimately destroying parts of the forest directly or indirectly, their effects aided and abetted by storms. Released, drifting kelp is a major cause of kelp mortality since it entangles other healthy plants and increases the possibility of their being ripped up in storms.

As a result, urchins were associated with major declines in kelp beds in southern California in the late 1950s and 1960s, with their impacts also enhanced by warming ocean waters and sewage outfalls (at the same time abalones also suffered a decline).

Thus, when the commercial fishery for large red urchins began nine years ago it was welcomed as a way to rid kelp beds of a "pest"; to enhance kelp growth (for kelp-harvesting); and to provide economic incentives for increasing numbers of abalone fishermen who had watched one species of abalone after another being depleted by excessive human pressure (5.5 million lbs. landed, 1957; 1.3 million, 1977). And the economic incentives of the urchin fishery proved considerable; its commercial value rose from 0 in 1971 to $30 million by 1977, with virtually all the roe exported to Japan.

Starting in Avila in 1971, with 200 pounds landed, the fishery moved to the Santa Barbara area in 1972 and urchin harvests grew rapidly to an estimated 16 million pounds by 1979, with over 11 million pounds of urchins removed each year for the last four years. Thus it eventually became apparent that the gourmet tastes of the Japanese were being satisfied at the expense of the health of the red urchin fishery, as well as the marine ecosystem.

No fishery, or marine community, based on the selective and massive removal of one species can remain unaffected forever.

•

THUS, SINCE THE MID-1970s, certain ecological studies of the California Sea Grant College Program have focused on sea urchin natural history and population dynamics, including recruitment behavior patterns and the interrelationships of the two most important California urchins and their relative grazing effects on kelp forests — with the hope that the findings would lead to a Fish and Game sea urchin management plan. Certain findings and predictions stemming from these studies are as follows:

I. Small red urchins spend their first year hidden almost exclusively (81%) under the spines of adult red urchins (up to 38 under one) where they, and juvenile abalones, share the larger urchin's food (drift kelp) and find safe refuge.

These young urchins, future recruitment to the fishery, are exposed to predators when adult urchins are harvested (starfish, spiny lobsters, cancer crabs, and California sheephead — a fish which often follows urchin fishermen around to feed on small, exposed urchins).

Thus, the harvesting of many millions of large red sea urchins each year not only reduces the reproductive potential of the urchin population but removes their prime nursery and refuge grounds as well — adversely affecting the survival rate of both young urchins and abalones.

II. The selective removal of red urchins from a kelp community releases both space and food for purple urchins and results in an increase in population size and productivity.

Thus, purple urchin abundance will increase in heavily-fished areas.

Purple urchins are much more flexible than red in recruitment behavior and settle in a wider range of micro-habitats, including kelp holdfasts [more frequently and at higher densities than reds], under rocks, in cobble, and under adult urchins.

Purple urchins have a greater negative effect on giant kelp than does the same biomass of red urchins; the two species also differ in the way they affect kelp holdfasts (in an experiment, all red urchins placed on holdfasts moved off, whereas most purple urchins remained and all began to burrow in).

Thus, if overharvesting red urchins leads to replacement by purple urchins, kelp mortality may increase, reducing habitat for urchins, abalones, spiny lobsters, crabs, rockfish and other kelp forest inhabitants.

•

WHAT HAS THIS INFORMATION meant to management of the red urchin fishery? Recognizing that the effects of the commercial fishery on recruitment of red urchins will probably be determined (and the fishery be limited) by the number of large and mid-sized adult urchins fishermen leave behind to serve as nursery areas, Washington State (which lands about one million pounds annually) has issued management regulations: a season, upper and lower size limits, zonal closures, and permanent research areas. Only red urchins are harvested, boats in the fishery have to have specific identification, permits are issued, and there is a log system connected with the permit.

The State of California — where most of the ecological studies were done and where over 11 million pounds of urchins per year have been harvested since 1976 — has done nothing in the way of imposing fishery regulations, other than instituting a log system (to count the catch).

Future "management options" mentioned at the last meeting of DFG with urchin fishermen (3/9/78) included: establishing size limits and closed areas on a rotational basis, curtailing effort, and establishing a permit system.

With 16 million pounds estimated as a probable landing figure for 1979, it appears high time the fishermen and the DFG finally bite the bullet and agree to regulate this heavily-impacted fishery.

Almost all potential urchin areas are now being exploited and sizes taken are dropping in San Diego. Primary harvest areas are the northern Channel Islands, Palos Verdes Peninsula, and Point Loma, with landings increasing around Fort Bragg.

Obviously sea otters may not find too many urchins to eat as they expand their range south and north, but they certainly cannot be made the scapegoats for this one!!

Alcoholism board has vacancies

The Monterey County Health Department has several vacancies on the Monterey County Alcoholism Advisory Board.

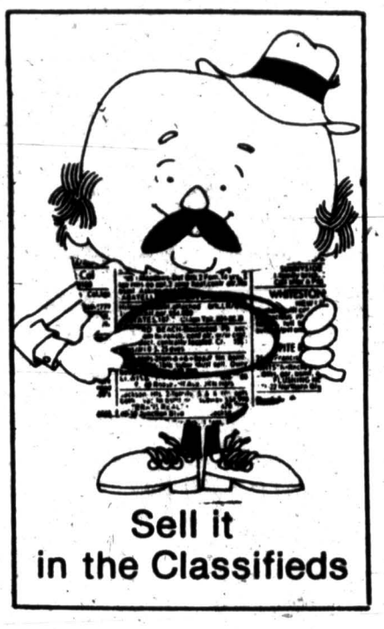
Interested people are urged to apply for appointment.

The 15-member board is appointed by the Board of Supervisors to oversee governmentally-funded alcoholism treatment and education services in the county. In an advisory capacity to the supervisors, the Alcoholism Advisory Board has responsibilities regarding the implementing, monitoring and evaluating of programs, along with assessment of community needs.

Members are needed to represent law enforcement, industry, the medical profession, education, religion and the community in general.

Board duties include monthly meetings and occasional visits to programs. Travel expenses for meetings may be reimbursed.

For more information, contact the alcoholism administrator at the Monterey County Health Department, 373-0111 or 757-1061.



Offices planned

A FIVE-UNIT condominium office building is proposed for a parcel in the post office tract on Carmel Rancho Boulevard near Rio Road.

Richard Dziedric of Carmel has applied to rezone the 60,000-square foot parcel to allow the Cambridge Court subdivision.

Although proposed as professional offices, the project is categorized as a subdivision to allow sale of the individual offices as condominiums.

A use permit was approved for the project by the county zoning administrator last November.

The application asks for a rezoning from the existing R-3 District (limited, multiple-family dwellings) to some other classification to allow the condominiums, according to county Planning Department staff.

The county Planning Commission will consider his application at 3:10 p.m., July 23, in the County Courthouse.

Proposed as a condominium subdivision, the 35,121-square-foot project would be five offices in a two-story building.

Mid-Valley Garden Homes has 64 units.

More than half the garden apartments in Mid-Valley sold

By STEVE HELLMAN

OWNERS OF THE APARTMENT complex in Mid-Carmel Valley that was converted earlier this year to a stock cooperative report that more than half the units have been sold.

Thomas David of Bay Tree Properties in Menlo Park said the midpoint in sales passed this month for the 64-unit Mid-Valley Garden Homes on Center Street.

Bay Tree bought the development last year from Porter-Marquard Realty, and filed with the state Real Estate Department to convert the units to a stock cooperative, an arrangement similar to condominiums.

The conversion was opposed by some tenants who charged it would force them to move since many could not afford to buy a unit.

One-bedroom apartments are being offered for $96,800, two-bedroom units for $127,400. Buyers purchase the units as individual shares of stock in the Mid-Valley Garden Cooperative Inc. One share entitles the buyer to a 99-year lease for a specific unit.

Rent on a two-bedroom apartment was $425. The estimated monthly carrying charge for a two-bedroom apartment is $1,200.

Skip Marquard of Porter-Marquard Realty, which is handling sales, said last week that most of the units have gone to cash buyers.

"It's a mix of buyers, mostly cash buyers," he said. "Some are tenants, some investment buyers who are leasing back to tenants and some out-of-town buyers who want a second home."

Cash buyers are given discounts, Marquard said, of $5,000 on a one-bedroom unit and $7,000 on a two-bedroom unit.

Marquard hailed the conversion last January as an ideal opportunity for investors, one that he said offered great tax benefits to anyone in the 50 percent tax bracket.

"They buy a unit, rent it below their debt service and carrying charges, then realize great tax consequences," he had said then.

•

SALE of the units, however, has not been as brisk as Porter-Marquard predicted.

Don Middleton, a partner in the company, said in January that sale of the units and formation of the homeowners association (the cooperative) would be completed within two months.

Marquard explained last week all but four or five units were in escrow until mortgage rates escalated in March.

"We had a lot of our buyers withdraw during escrow when the mortgage rates went high," he said.

After the mortgage rates dropped in May and June, the units started selling again.

According to bylaws of the conversion, once a majority of the units have been sold, a meeting of the buyers must be held to elect a board of directors to run the cooperative.

Marquard said that title had passed on more than half the units, and that the meeting would be held within three weeks.

Brehmer backs Kline

CITY ATTORNEY George Brehmer has added legal emphasis to the overturning of a Board of Adjustments ruling by the City Council July 7 that denied a variance to Melvin Kline.

Kline was seeking a reduction in the number of parking spaces required to build an apartment complex on Junipero between Fourth and Fifth.

In a prepared statement, Brehmer found that Kline was entitled to the reduction of two of 10 parking spaces required by ordinance to begin work on the complex.

The Board of Adjustments had denied the variance June 18.

Brehmer's findings were presented to the City Council Monday (July 14).

Brehmer stated that a notice of a public hearing was published 10 days before the council hearing on the matter, and that no public opposition was noted at the hearing.

"The decision-maker (the Board of Adjustments) erred in its findings," Brehmer said.

Kline had argued that a hardship was placed on the land he proposes to develop due to the rezoning of the property to R-4, which prohibits on-site parking.

Previously, Kline had used the property to provide off-site parking for two other properties he owns, Mission Patio and The Broken Egg.

The parking site was created rather than purchasing "in-lieu parking" at the request of the City Council, in 1972 and in 1974.

"The granting of the variance will not adversely affect the general zoning plan of the city, or the general zoning objectives of the district within which the affected property lies," Brehmer said.

It will not injure the public health, safety or welfare and will not adversely affect the character of the neighborhood in that the variance is not a physical variance and will not result in any physical changes, and the benefits flowing from the proposed project outweigh any detriment, he said.

"There are special circumstances connected with the case that cause undue hardship to the applicant in that he cannot physically place the parking on any of the parcels involved, and land is not available at this time on which to place the required parking," Brehmer said.

•

COUNCILMAN MIKE BROWN strenuously objected to the city attorney's findings.

"I still feel the hardship is on the individual rather than on the land," he said.

Planning Commission regulations state that a hardship must be found on the land in order to grant a parking variance.

"Mr. Kline has been caught in an administrative entanglement that is not his fault," Councilwoman Helen Arnold said.

Kline rejected the notion that he planned to build low-cost housing on the site on Junipero.

"I never promised I would do that," he said. "No one has defined just what low-cost housing is in Carmel."

Kline said, after the meeting, that he can build the proposed apartments only if funding is found.

"Banks are unwilling to lend me the money," he said.

Low-income housing is urged for Carmel

CITY PLANNING Director Robert Griggs said more low-income housing is needed to keep workers in Carmel.

Griggs is waiting to receive final tabulations from the U.S. Census Bureau on a house count taken in Carmel this year.

Griggs said he will compare the Census Bureau figures with his own to see if the federal agency missed counting any houses.

"I need the letter in order to complete my own study," Griggs said.

Nationally, the census is two to three months behind due to a mailing system that took the census this year, he said.

After his own census, Griggs said he concluded more low-income housing is needed in Carmel to retain workers.

Most of the people who work in Carmel live elsewhere, he said. Of the 2,491 households here and a population of 4,756, only 379 Carmel residents actually work here. The rest are either retired, unemployed or work elsewhere.

Griggs said his count shows that there are 2,930 dwellings in Carmel; 2,657 are single-unit housing and the rest either duplex, triplex or apartments. Many are unoccupied.

Fifty percent of all homes in Carmel are owner-occupied, with the rest as rentals, Griggs said.

Scouts complete 50-mile hike

Six Scouts from Carmel's Boy Scout Troop 3 have returned from a 50-mile backpacking hike in the Sierras.

The Scouts hiked for nine days in the Devil's Postpile area near Mammuth Lakes, where they encountered snow on the ground, high water in the streams and were required to make several difficult stream crossings.

They hiked 51.5 miles and qualified for the Los Angeles Council's John Muir Award.

Scouts participating were Van Crego, Addison Phillips, Chris Bowe, Clifton Bonner, Siegfried Lackner and Conard Lindgren. The scouts were accompanied by Scoutmaster Art Crego and Assistant Scoutmaster Allen Gamber.

Julie Anne Frederickson

Student wins awards

Julie Anne Frederickson of Carmel has won three awards for academic achievement.

Ms. Frederickson has been awarded both a Summer School and Academic Year Scholarship to the Monterey Institute of International Studies, and also received the American Association of University Women Scholarship Award.

She was graduated from Monterey Peninsula College this spring, serving two terms as a member of MPC student government.

Ms. Frederickson has also been awarded a French Language Achievement Award and a Humanities Division Book Grant.

Cross takes laurels in surfing competition

FINALS FOR A "SURFABOUT" held at Carmel Beach July 22 were completed Sunday, July 29, with Carmel's Marc Cross emerging as the "Best All ARound Waterman" for the entire event.

Called the Sunshine Free-Style/Ocean Pacific Sportswear Surfabout, the competition, which drew 138 contestants from all over Monterey County, may become an annual event, according to coordinator Brad Johnson of Carmel.

Winner of the Men's Division July 29 was Robin Jeffers of Carmel. He is the grandson of poet Robinson Jeffers. The Men's Division included contestants 17 to 24 years old.

Jeffers won a close contest with Billy Simpson, also of Carmel, and William Mudd.

Judges said that Jeffers' smooth, clean approach to the waves, plus the great distances he achieved on most of his efforts, clinched the surfing title for him.

Mudd pleased the judges with a difficult "roller coaster," turning straight up one of the bigger waves, almost leaving the water, then cutting sharply down the face of the wave. Wave selection also helped Mudd capture second place in the competition, judges said.

Simpson, riding an unfamiliar board, was unable to "put it all together," as one observer said, during the critical 20 minutes of actual participation on the board at the end of the contest.

Marc Cross

Simpson won third place in the men's finals.

After the men's finals, the Masters took over.

From start to finish, Cross set the pace and relinquished nothing, judges said.

Scott Lundy thrilled the crowd and pleased judges with three sizzling rides that brought a roar of approval from spectators as he slashed through a wave, then rocketed back and forth on the thundering crest before stepping off his board onto dry sand, judges said.

When the smoke cleared, Cross won 139 to 135. Third place went to Big Sur's Terry Rogenson.

Winners received surfing equipment.

Mrs. P. Remillard

Miss Parsons wed in Carmel

Nancy Lyn Parsons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Parsons of Carmel, exchanged vows with Page Remillard, July 5, in a garden wedding at the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev. James Brock of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church officiated.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Carmel High School and was a Carmel Barracuda coach. She received her degree from Pomona College in Claremont this year, and will enter graduate school at the University of Virginia in September.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Remillard of La Verne. He is a graduate of California State Poly in Pomona and the University of La Verne. He is aquatics director at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

Mrs. John Clark of Buena Park was matron of honor. Maureen Horan of Carmel and Karen Kleinman of Upland were bridesmaids.

David Wells of Claremont was best man. Andrew Parsons, the bride's brother, was an usher and played wedding music on the guitar.

A reception for 120 was held in the garden.

The couples' honeymoon was in Maui and Mexico. They will live in Lexington, Va.

Council tables trees until fall

CONSIDERATION OF Carmel's controversial tree ordinance, which requires the approval of City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio for a tree on private property to be removed, will be taken up in October when the ordinance is scheduled for review by law.

Mayor Barney Laiolo placed the item on the City Council agenda for Monday (July 14).

"The Constitution of the United States guarantees certain rights of the use of private property," Laiolo said.

The issue was raised July 7 when Barnet Segal appealed a decison by D'Ambrosio not to remove a tree on Segal's property.

The City Council told Segal to return to the Forestry Commission and reapply for a tree removal permit befoire the council would hear his appeal.

Segal was urged by Laiolo to sue the city if he is not successful in obtaining the permit.

HOME - BLUE CHIP INVESTMENT

With all the talk these days about protecting your dollar, sound investments and hedges against inflation, the purchase of a home is often mentioned. And it's true, a well-built home in a good neighborhood is one of the best hedges against inflation your money can buy.

In the recent years of inflation, for example, home and land values have more than kept abreast of the general rise in prices. This means your home investment puts you considerably ahead of the game financially. Not to mention the pride and pleasure that home ownership can bring you.

There is no reason to believe that this situation will change in the near (or not-so-near future). The government tight money policies have put a crimp into single family home building starts this past year but the demand for these homes is constantly increasing. So, it looks like prices will continue to rise. Add to this the tax benefits of home ownership which allow you to keep more of what you earn. So, look for the best home your money con buy in the best neighborhood you can afford, and enjoy your inflation hedge.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

HOW TO PLAY THE ONE

You, White, roll 6-1 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it? The doubling cube is on your side of the table. Note that you have one man on the bar.

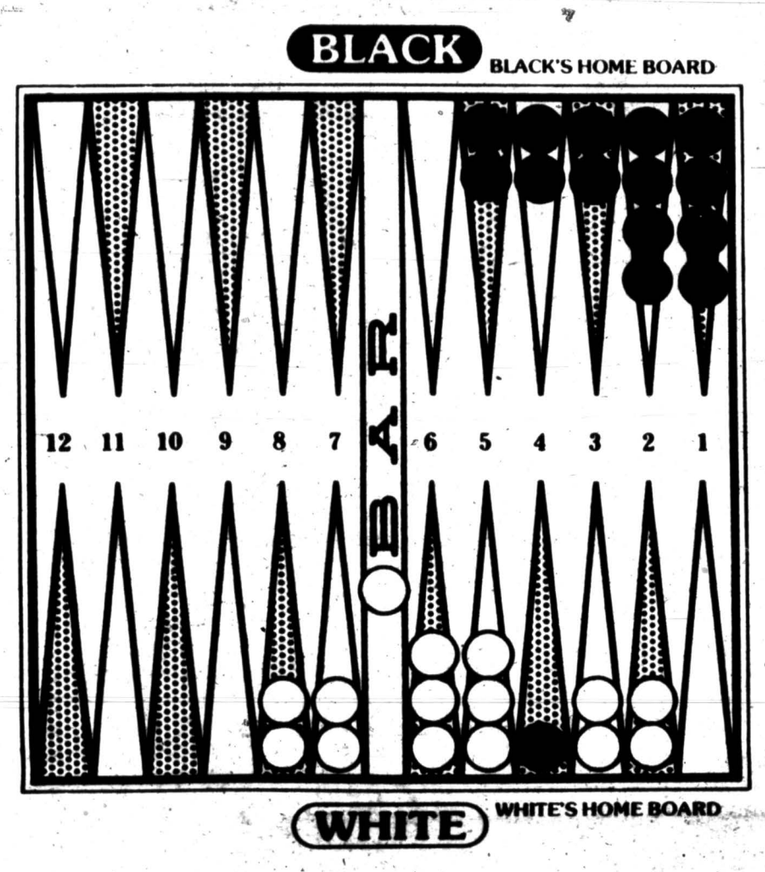
You're glad to re-enter the board with the six. The only question is how to play the one.

If you simply move out of Black's home board you may have a shot at him as he comes around the board. If you miss that shot, Black is a heavy favorite to win the race.

If you take the one by hitting his blot on your 4-point, the odds are almost 2 to 1 that he will not hit you right back. If he rolls 4-5 or 4-6, hitting your blot and escaping, you will lose the game you were going to lose anyway. If he rolls 4-3 or 4-2, he must come in and leave a blot in his home board.

Best of all, if Black stays out or comes in on your 1-point, you are a favorite to win the game instead of losing it.

Would like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.



Plans accepted despite building moratorium

Los Laureles EIR is certified

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday, July 15, to allow developers in Carmel Valley to submit preliminary subdivision maps and prepare environmental impact reports despite a moratorium on Valley development.

In a related action, supervisors certified the EIR for the proposed expansion of the Los Laureles Lodge, and scheduled a hearing July 29 to consider certifying the EIR for the proposed development of the Odello family farmland.

Action on the projects was taken despite policies in the building moratorium that prohibit certification of EIRs.

Supervisors also sidestepped a new state law and ignored the recommendation of its Planning Department staff in certifying the Los Laureles Lodge EIR.

The guideline adopted in May for the California Environmental Quality Act holds that an EIR must address a project's consistency with the county General Plan, or the portion of it applicable to the project—in this case, the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Planning Department staff recommended against certifying the Los Laureles Lodge EIR, and also advised against accepting preliminary map applications since the new Carmel Valley Master Plan was ruled invalid June 6 in Monterey County Superior Court.

County Counsel Ralph Kuchler ruled, however, that the supervisors were not blocked by the new CEQA guideline.

Kuchler said supervisors could certify the EIR for Los Laureles Lodge based on the existing 1961 Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The building moratorium, which is to remain in effect while the county prepares an EIR for the Master Plan, prohibits approval of tentative subdivision maps, use permits, rezonings and Specific Plans, and also blocks certification of EIRs.

THE MORATORIUM was in effect for a year while the supervisors were reviewing and adopting the new Master Plan, although during that time the county had agreed to accept applications for preliminary subdivision maps and allow preparation of EIRs short of certification.

Supervisors had assumed during that time that the new Master Plan was headed for approval, and therefore could be used as a basis for processing preliminary, non-discretionary applications for development in the Valley.

They agreed July 15 to continue that practice, although with the admonition to developers that they may have to amend their EIRs after a new Master Plan is adopted.

Regarding the EIR for the proposed 28-unit expansion of Los Laureles Lodge, County Zoning Administrator Bob Slimmon advised that an EIR could be processed, but not certified until after a new Master Plan is adopted.

Kuchler at first supported Slimmon's stand, citing the state law that was adopted in May.

Attorney Robert D'Isidoro, however, representing the lodge owners, argued that the supervisors had no valid excuse for not accepting the EIR as complete and certifying it.

"This EIR was ordered by the county, and $4,700 was extracted from my client last year for its preparation," he said. "It's not my client's fault that it has taken 10 months for it to come before your board for certification."

Supervisor Sam Farr asked whether the county could use the 1961 Carmel Valley Master Plan as the basis for accepting the EIR. Kuchler ruled that there was no law against doing that.

Supervisors will consider certifying the EIR for the Odello project, although they are prohibited by the moratorium from approving the Specific Plan for the project.

The Specific Plan envisions a 200-unit hotel, 97 condominiums and a farmers' market on the Odellos' 134 acres east of Highway 1 and south of the Carmel River.

DORI KERCHEVAL, top right, rolls paint onto the backdrops as India Harrison finishes gluing a piece. The weeks before the opening of Hamlet and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead were busy for the production crews. The rain earlier this month was not a setback since many crew members are Forest Theater veterans who understand the quirks of Carmel summers. The opening night of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead found the audience warmly settled between the two fires and the actors in good form, center. The rustic, outdoor theater presented its first production in 1910. Warm sweaters and jugs with hot drinks are standard equipment for many of the theatergoers here who enjoy the roof of stars and fragrant pine trees. Swordfights such as this one, top left, being rehearsed for Hamlet are hard to stage, as Mark Shuler, fight choreographer has discovered. Safety of the actors is his primary concern, but swordplay must appear convincing to the audience. Danny Gochnauer, left, who plays Hamlet, rehearses a fight sequence with Charles Murphy who portrays Laertes. Weary Mike Frecceri, lower right, stretches out backstage during a break in rehearsals. Frecceri and many other actors, actresses and production crew members are active in both plays and find they have a busy summer. Catnaps become a luxury. Cathy Johnstone, center right, climbs high up a tower to adjust lights for the stage below. She designed the lighting for both productions.

The Music Corner

Another summer cloudburst: Bach reigns in Carmel

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

IT WAS CALM before the Bach.

But the pressure was building inside Sunset Center. The 1,000 details that passed before the gaze of Bach Festival maestro Sandor Salgo were handled with the serene efficiency of a quarter century's experience. Familiar friends were greeted and new ones welcomed. Professional and amateur musicians were methodically formed into performing ensembles of excellence. The hours of preparation ran long and late.

But except for the new faces arriving daily and the brief but intense conversations that chattered between participants coming and going, the calm was unbroken.

Until last Friday evening.

With a sudden courtyard fanfare of brass, the 43rd Carmel Bach Festival was under way. And the splashy noise precipitated a cloudburst of Bach that swept participants and spectators alike into high gear with dazzling abruptness and high style.

For Salgo, the music of Bach is food for the soul and contact with spiritual timelessness. The maestro becomes cantor. He is priest and teacher, realizing the universal truths and fathomless wisdom of, as he puts it, "the last great religious artist."

Two of Bach's finest cantatas framed two of his most enchanting concertos in the opening concert. The maestro exhibited the kind of fascination for symbolism that held Bach's fancy. The opening work, Cantata BWV 4 Christ lag in Todesbanden, represents the triumph of the immortal soul over the brief sting of death, and provided ideal transport into the composer's mentality, where death is release to eternity and an object of joy.

The recreation of that work was splendid. The choirs easily matched the high standards of past seasons and the orchestra, on the small side, was crisp and clear, with its sonorities made deep and rich by the baroque organ on stage right.

Salgo, combining his formidible scholarship with loving instinct, brought vivid relief to the ever changing combinations of voices and instruments, here enhancing antiphony, there stressing the dramatic pause, elsewhere crisply animating the dance rhythms. Dynamics and phrasing were similarly underscored. In verses V and VII, the soft introspective moments were slowed and treated with mystery while the next words, in both cases shouts of joy, were startling eruptions of power and conviction.

The Brandenburg Concerto No 2 featured Charles Daval, trumpet; Brooks de Witter-Smith, flute; Ray Duste, oboe; and Mar, Volkert, violin. Cellist Doug Ischar joined harpsichordist Bruce Lamott in the continuo.

Salgo started the first movement briskly, then softened the tempo. Volkert played with an intense vibrato, and Duste allowed a bit of rhythmic unpredictability. Salgo stood aside for the trio sonata of the slow movement and led a bright and shining finale.

The Brandenburg No. 3 was richly realized by the strings, both as orchestra and in individual passages and dialogues. The tempi of the two movements were generous, and the final cadence was too broad to hold the strands of the fabric clearly together.

Harpsichordist Lamott played a solo number to bridge the two movements of the concerto and to achieve the requisite modulation of key, though the chosen piece, in its unfolding, began to keep us waiting.

To balance the program, as Bach would no doubt appreciate, was another cantata, the BWV 140 Wachet auf. This ravishing work revolves around the dialogue of Jesus and the soul and is based on the parable of the wise virgins. Bach fashioned the dialogue into a love affair, with the first duet made sensual and romantic by an Italian-style violin obbligato, and the second depicting the happiness of the consummated lovers with an oboe obbligato and charming dance rhythm.

Salgo chose a relatively brisk tempo for the stunning opening chorus (the one in which the sopranos with unison horn, carry the chorale tune at half time) and the result emphasized the sturdy downbeat. In a sense that kept the movement earthbound and prevented it from soaring.

Tenor Thomas Goleeke sang the first recitative with personal intensity.

In both duets, Mary Esther Nicola and William Ramsey were sympathetic and tasteful lovers.

Rosemary Waller's violin obbligato was understated and true, and Ray Duste's solo was mostly fine, though occasionally independent in phrase and rhythm.

Salgo took the famous middle chorale with the same briskness that marked the opening. The tenors sang the unison tune with forcefulness while the violins played their entrancing melody with deliberately detached phrases. But it was in the final chorale that the conductor fully exploited the emotional depth of the piece.

Salgo led the movement with heartfelt, almost sentimental, expression. The piece uses the same chorale melody heard in the opening, but set in a more conventional four-part manner. The choir sang with full richness and strength and, in the Kein aug' . . . Kein Ohr . . . lines with hushed and finely molded intensity, rose powerfully to the joyous conclusion.

After much applause, the maestro quieted the audience to describe the finale as "our favorite chorale" and offered it again to a grateful assembly.

While the concert production did not visually realize the many comic aspects of the work, it still came off with reasonable success in David Hammond's staging. The ACT costumes certainly helped. The Edward Dent English translation was an excellent choice in bringing the concentrated wit of the libretto to the audience.

The cast was generally excellent, as was the orchestra and participating chorus members. Most of the principals acted their parts with skill and clever effect.

William Ramsey has long been known for his fine dramatics and, while not possessed of a big or deeply resonant voice, makes a generous and finely spun sound which he uses with intelligence and artistry. He was a marvelous Figaro, though the scope of the part reflected more his Papageno in last year's Magic Flute.

Kaaren Herr Erickson stole the show as Susannah. Her singing was as clearly articulate as her voice production was ideally focused and even. Her acting was irresistable and showed a many-facted character.

Robert Goodloe and Rebecca Cook, both new to the Festival, were the County and Countess. Miss Cook sang Madama Butterfly at Hidden Valley a couple of seasons ago and, as then, displayed minimal stage action and a lovely sound, but inarticulate diction.

Goodloe was a find sounding baritone with aristocratic bearing and comfortable stage movements.

Linn Maxwell was Cherubino, but despite her costume and boyish motions, she was impossible to see as a young man. She maintained a good concept of the role though, and her singing was nearly always excellent.

Martha Jane Howe was a successful Marcellina.

Gregory Wait was a cleverly wheedling Basilio.

Robert Lopez, James Hull and Dawn Rykert were all complementary performers.

The performance was much fun as befits the opera, though the profound beauty of some of Mozart's arias was not as glowingly realized as is possible.

•

ON SUNDAY afternoon, was the cathedral of Bach's Mass in B Minor, and it was marvelous under Salgo's characteristic devotion and thorough professionalism.

He molded and shaped the great choral fugue of the first Kyrie with clear purpose, starting softly and expressively and building it into a grand edifice of form and sonority. The choirs were outstanding and all but washed over the small orchestra.

In the Christe eleison, soprano Pamela South, a fairly late addition to the festival, and mezzo Gwendolyn Jones sang a not totally unified conception, though they probably will in the next two performances.

Miss South projected a bright and forward sound, while Miss Jones' was a deeper and darker color. Salgo deployed the second choral Kyrie in much the same manner as the first.

The long Gloria movement, like many of Bach's cantatas, is a pageant of choruses, arias and one duet. Contrasts abound and Salgo exploited them at every turn. Even the opening chorus ranged from festive spectacle to dreamy introspection.

Miss Jones was rhythmically sluggish in the Laudamus te, seeming a bit insecure, but Miss Waller's violin solo was true and strong, if understated.

Gregory Wait was commanding and clear in his duet with Miss South and, with the added sureness of flutist de Wetter-Smith, the piece was smooth sailing.

A second flute joined in as the chorale, seated, sang the soft and thoughtful Qui tollis. Oboist Ray Duste and alto Linn Maxwell realized the Qui sedes and hornist Arthur Krebiel provided obbligato to the Quoniam to solus of Elwood Thornton, whose bass was a bit stressed by the piece and its many running notes.

The choral finale to the movement was exultant and electrifying.

In the Credo, the progression of the three choruses that culminate in the Et resurrexit went, if anything, too quickly. The Et incarnatus est was gloomy (as it typically is) and the Crucifixus was quicker and less brooding than one often hears. But the Et ressurexit was splendid.

In the duet Et in unum Dominum, soprano South was a bit insecure, but not for long and, with oboes, William Ramsey did a fine Et in spiritum.

The three-section final chorus Confiteor was set in fine detail and contrast by Salgo and the combined forces.

The female chorus members were all brought forward for the Sanctus which, with enhanced antiphony, was radiant. The choruses were reassembled in still a different configuration for the Osanna which, too, was splendid. With a brief return of it between, the two remaining solos were realized by flute and tenor in the Benedictus, and by alto with unison violins in the haunting Agnus dei.

The finale Dona nobis pacen for chorus (despite anything to the contrary that you might recently have read) was built along the same steady deliberation that conductor Salgo brought to the opening Kyrie.

It was a many-colored and many-faced performance of this culminating utterance of Bach's eclectic and architectural imagination and expressive heart, and many audience members were deeply enriched by the experience.

•

HIDDEN VALLEY had its own Bach Festival Sunday night when New York Philharmonic principal flutist Julius Baker played the complete accompanied sonatas of Bach with harpsichordist Mark Kroll.

A sell-out audience appeared to once again revel in the exquisite mastery of Baker, who is conducting a master class this week at the Carmel Valley site.

Baker is one of the greats, though he eschews an aristocratic bearing. His tone is whatever color he wants it to be and is totally free of breathiness and extraneous noises. And yet his phrasing and musical sighs and impulses are so riveting that what for others would be subtleties are for him the obvious. Because of that, it is easy to tell how involved in a piece he is feeling.

Last Sunday, he was more involved here and less involved there. His music making was always superb, but when it was magical it became more obvious when it was not. Fortunately, it was mostly magical, especially in the Sonata in C BWV 1033 and the Sonata in G Minor BWV 1020 (a piece some consider of doubtful authenticity). On that point the Sonata in E Flat BWV 1031 sounded more like Handel, J.C. Bach and Gluck than it did like Sebastian Bach, and it, too, is suspect.

The magnificent Baker found fine and sensitive support in Mark Kroll and cellist Judiyaba and, in the program closer, pianist Martha Rearick, who accompanied in a sentimental showoff Divertimento by Friedrich Kuhlau, an early 19th century lightweight.

Scott MacClelland is classical music director for KWAV FM 97.

43rd Carmel Festival

Bach Festival enters second week

GLORIOUS 18TH century works of the world's unparalleled composers will continue to reign as the 43rd Carmel Bach Festival enters its second week of concerts, recitals, lectures and symposia. The 17-day-long Festival, which began Friday, July 11, will repeat the first week of concerts during its second phase.

All concerts, with the exception of the Founders' Memorial Concert, are presented at Sunset Center, Carmel. Weeknight performances begin at 8 p.m., with Saturday programs at 3 p.m., and Sunday concerts at 2 p.m.

Celebrating his silver anniversary as musical director and conductor, Maestro Sandor Salgo will lead the Festival Orchestra in The Mass in B Minor by J.S. Bach (Sunday, July 20 and 27); Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro and Bach's Brandenburg Concerto's Nos. 2 and 3 plus Cantatas 4 and 140 (Monday, July 20).

Thursday concerts (July 17 and 24) will feature Beethoven's Trio in E Flat, Op. 70, No. 2 with The Alma Trio; Bach's Chaconne from Partita in d, BWV 1004, Mozart's Sonata for Violin and Piano in E Flat Major, K481; and Trio in E Flat, Op. No. 1 by Beethoven.

Haydn's Symphony No. 93 in D Major will be the major work at the Friday concerts (July 18 and 25). Other works are Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488 and concert aria Chi'io mi scordi di te, K. 505, both by Mozart; and Bach's cantata Wie schon leuchtet der Morgenstern, BWV 1.

The concert Tuesday, July 22 will include Mozart's Symphony in D Major ("Haffner") K. 385 by Mozart; Vivaldi's Concerto for Four Violins in B Minor; Carissimi's Giudizium Solomonis ("The Judgment of Solomon") and Bach's cantata Weichet nur, BWV 202.

•

MUSIC OF THE FRENCH baroque will be performed at the Founders' Memorial Concert in Carmel Mission Basilica Wednesday, July 23 at 9 p.m.

The traditional Music for Young Listeners concert will be presented Thursday, July 24 at 2 p.m. by the Bach Festival Orchestra. All seats are 50 cents; however, adults must be accompanied by a child 8 years and older.

Daytime recitals at the Bach Festival, preferred by many Festival devotees because they are more intimate than the larger evening concerts, will be performed through Saturday, July 26.

An organ recital to be given in Bethlehem Lutheran Church, 800 Cass St., Monterey, will be presented Tuesday, July 22 at 3 p.m., by Kenneth Ahrens.

A piano recital will be offered Wednesday, July 23 by Ilana Vered at the Performing Arts Center of Santa Catalina School, Mark Thomas Drive, Monterey. The program begins at 11 a.m.

All other recitals begin at 11 a.m. in the Parish Hall of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Lincoln and Ninth, Carmel. Tickets are $3.50 for each event. There are no reserved seats.

•

RECITAL ARTISTS and programs follow:

- Thursday, July 17 and 24: Chamber Music for French Horn and Ensemble with Arthur Krehbiel, French horn.
- Friday, July 18: Music for Two Harpsichords, Madeline Ingstram and Bruce Lamott on harpsichord and Brooks de Wetter-Smith, flute.
- Saturday, July 19: Bach's Complete Sonatas and Partitas for Solo Violin (I) featuring violinist Christiane Edinger.
- Tuesday, July 22: chamber music by Mayumi Ohira, Douglas Ischar, Jeff Kahane and soprano Diane Thomas.
- Friday, July 25: Instrumental and Vocal Chamber Music by members of the Festival Chorale and Orchestra conducted by Priscilla Salgo.
- Saturday, July 26: The complete Sonatas and Partitas for Solo Violin (II) performed by violinist Christiane Edinger.

In addition, three lectures and two symposia will be offered free of charge by the Carmel Bach Festival. Each program begins at 3 p.m. in the Parish Hall of All Saints' Episcopal Church.

A symposium about Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro will be moderated by Dr. Raymond Kendall Friday, July 18 and 25.

Bach's The Mass in B Minor will be the lecture topic of Dr. Kendall Thursday, July 24. Music of the French Baroque will be discussed Wednesday, July 23.

•

A LIMITED NUMBER of tickets are still available for some concerts and recitals. Many Festival ticket holders who cannot attend a performance will return tickets to the Bach Festival office. Concert hopefuls may then purchase tickets on a first-come, first-served basis at the Sunset Center box office.

For additional information, phone 624-1521.

The wine connoisseur

A 'menage a trois' among wineries

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

SAN FRANCISCO — IN THE YOSEMITE ROOM of the Four Seasons Clift Hotel, at 11:30 a.m. on July 1, invited wine media-folk began to assemble for an announcement of special significance at the invitation of Renfield Importers Ltd. of New York.

By coincidence, we arrived promptly with Herman Merinoff, Renfield's president, encountering at once the protagonist of the unfolding drama, Rodney D. Strong, winemaker of Sonoma Vineyards. Our eyes met, and before we could come together to shake hands, an alert attendant in the anteroom offered us a tall flute of Piper-Heidsieck 1973 Brut Champagne. The rumor of an impending move to California by a major French Champagne house had sudden confirmation and definition.

"Congratulations, Rod," I said, more as a friend than a reporter, but quickly put down my Champagne beside a silver platter of foie gras canapes to get my camera to record the beginnings of this great day.

"'Have you met the Marquis d'Aulan?" he asked, indicating an equally happy gentleman approaching us. The room was beginning to fill with familiar California journalists, all arriving with the same kind of nervous expectancy, quickly taking glasses of Champagne, eyes scanning beyond the buffet of elegant canapes to the tables set for the luncheon to follow, seeking some evidence of the announcement to come.

All of us were familiar with the financial dramas of Sonoma Vineyards, which had come perilously close to bankruptcy in the mid-'70s. But today, Rod's demeanor was one of confident triumph over past trials, his poise no less majestic than the joint venture to be unveiled in the moments to come

•

WE HAD first met Rod Strong 10 years ago as workmen were completing the architecturally stunning cruciform winery near the banks of the Russian river at Windsor. Like most people, we first learned about this choreographer-turned-winemaker from our mailbox, in direct mail advertising solicitations from Tiburon Vintners. One could buy privately labeled wines with personalized dedications. The excellence of the wines had moved us to visit the source and meet the winemaker.

A whole decade of the California wine scene as it evolved with the great wine wave of the '70s crowded our consciousness on this new San Francisco morning in which Rod Strong was again the leading figure.

"I believe in vineyards," he had said, as we watched documentary films of his planting of his River West vineyards in cool Russian River area to Chardonnay and Johannisberg Riesling, Alexander's Crown to the highest saddleback of the Alexander Valley for Cabernet Sauvignon, and Iron Horse in the cool coastal mountains eight miles inland from the sea. "We don't want all the wines to go into one tank and come out puckety-puckety the same uniform taste. In any artistic form, one has a right to expect subtle differences. So we have different vines, different soils, different woods."

But there was more than wine being made here in Windsor at the handsome Sonoma Vineyards' 30,000 square-foot building, designed by Craig Roland, student-disciple of Frank Lloyd Wright. It was a confident monument to winemaking, an enduring structure surrounded by vineyards, in total dedication to the meaning of wine in California. The achievement of this winery in 1970 had been built upon 10 years of growth from a tasting room in 1960 with gross sales of $10,000 to more than $2 million in sales by the opening of this winery in Windsor in 1970.

"We don't want people to think we're making wine in a phone booth," Rod had said as we first walked up the spectacular entrance ramp rising over a reflecting pool and fountain. There was, too, an outdoor amphitheater and rooftop promenade for viewing the winery's 600 acres of surrounding Pinot Noir and Chardonnay vineyards.

Now, another decade later, all of us media-folk would learn the next chapter in thie history of Sonoma Vineyards.

We walked together to another room down the hallway from the Yosemite Room, with theater seating for a press conference. The first speaker, Kenneth Kwit, on behalf of Sonoma Vineyards announced "an international marriage . . . a menage a trois" among —Renfield, Sonoma Vineyards and Piper-Heidsieck of Reims.

"We will build a $6 million-plus winery, as a joint venture. The 40,000-square-foot facili'y will have fermentation capacity to produce 120,000 cases of wine, bottle-tirage stoage, a visitors' center, tasting room, and world-class restaurant in a marriage of French and American cuisine."

Architect Craig Roland, who designed the Sonoma Vineyards winery, then presented the renderings of the new winery, to be built next to the present winery. The consistency of one artistic hand easily drew the grandeur of the whole concept together to a dramatic architectual presence. Terraced to steps onto the hillside, in aggregate and concrete, it would have suggestions of a cave, grotto, with long, horizontally-sweeping lines. Construction would begin early in 1981, an initial product becoming available for sale in 1982. It would be called Piper-Sonoma Sparkling wine.

•

IN HIS participation in the morning's announcement, the Marquis Francois d'Aulan, director of Piper-Heidsieck, and a direct descendant of the ancient Champagne company's founders in Reims, sketched the distinguished history, from the founding by Florens-Louise Heidsieck in the 1770s.

By 1785, his reputation for fine wines had reached Paris. Queen Marie-Antoinette received him at Versailles and granted him the privilege of affixing the three fleur-de-lis to the bottling of their cuvees. It remains the only Champagne enjoying this distinction.

The principal establishment remains at Reims, near the famous cathedral, on a seven-acre estate, beneath which are 10 miles of cellars holding an inventory in excess of 15 million bottles. Though the company is listed on the Stock Exchange of the Paris Bourse, the founding family owns 70 percent of it.

"After 12 centuries, looking back even to the time of Julius Caesar, this is the first time our Champagne people have gone to other regions, turned their eyes to other countries, to California. We have found here a natural richness of soil and climate, but more than that, we have found in Rod Strong one capable of producing a wine equal to our own methode champenoise."

In brief and engaging postscript, the wife of the Marquis, Sonia d'Aulan, talked of women and Champagne, from Mme. Pompadour who averred that it was the only wine which allowed women to remain beautiful, to the procession of widows, as the Veuve Clicquot and Veuve Heidsieck, who carried on the making of the distinctive French sparkling wine.

Strong said "This wine (Piper-Sonoma) will not be called 'Champagne.'"

As winemaker at Sonoma, he would become the sole arbiter of the wine's production, from Sonoma's own grapes, for Brut, Blanc de Noir, and Tete de Cuvee bottlings, sensitive to the subtle difference of the grapes from Chalk Hill and River West vineyards.

It was a moving experience to look into the new future for Sonoma Vineyards, of justifiable pride for its protagonist, Rodney D. Strong.

Staff Players' special performances this weekend

Special performances of Jean Giraudoux's The Enchanted and the melodrama Dead Man's Mill will be staged by the Staff Players Repertory Company Friday and Saturday, July 18-19 to benefit the Children's Experimental Theatre. The Enchanted will be staged Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.; and the melodrama, 2 p.m., Saturday at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

Written by one of the great French playwrights, The Enchanted weaves a story of humor, grace and compassion. The play illuminates the moral and legendary world of the spirit with a promise of peace, and the world of a young man who holds a promise of life for a young girl.

Nick Hovick is director.

Theater critic Marc Rivette said, "The play is a winner. The Staff Players have come of age. They do not let the dramatists down even for one single minute."

A tale of courage in the heart of the Mother Lode, Dead Man's Mill promises to entertain audiences with its sneering villains and beautiful heroines. The original melodrama was written by C.E.T.'s director Marcia Gambrell Hovick.

Tickets are $4.50, general; and $2.50 for seniors and children.

For reservations, phone 375-6555 or 624-1531.

Bagpipers to perform in Sunday Concert Series

The skirl of pipes and swirl of kilts are promised Sunday, July 20 when St. Peter's Highlander Pipe Band of San Francisco marches through the streets of Carmel to the historic Forest Theater. At 1 p.m., the band will parade from Sunset Center down San Carlos to Ocean Avenue and up Mountain View to the theater for the concert at 2 p.m.

The program is part of the Sunday Afternoon Concert series sponsored by the City of Carmel.

Directed by Pipe Major James McElroy, the bagpipers will present folk songs and dances that date back centuries in old Scotland. Highland dancing originated in the small towns and villages that still dot the craggy landscape of Scotland. Its exuberant steps have influenced American square dancing.

Everyone is welcome to the parade and concert at no charge.

'My Fair Lady' full of vibrant enthusiasm

By MARC RIVETTE

YEARS AGO, when I first heard that Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe were planning a musical based upon George Bernard Shaw's play Pygmalion, I was sure it would not work. It did work, it has worked, and with this production at Hidden Valley, My Fair Lady continues to work beautifully.

As almost everyone knows by this time, Pygmalion was a sculptor who created a woman-statue that he fell in love with. Shaw — and Lerner and Loewe — create a diction expert, who bets he can transform a slatternly, Cockney flower girl into a lady worthy of being presented at the Embassy Ball.

The part of Professor Henry Higgins, portrayed by Al Ellington, is a challenge because of the deep impression made by Rex Harrison, who first appeared in the role on Broadway. Ellington manages not to lean too heavily on his forebear. Velvali de Ayxa, as Eliza Doolittle, runs into the same competition with Julie Andrews. Both leads managed to do justice to their parts, though in Miss de Ayxa's case, she was not sufficiently Wagnerian to always be heard above the full orchestra.

Jim Jenson, as Colonel Pickering, conveyed the bumbling, but tinged-with-warmth-and-sympathy-for-Eliza, English regimental officer. The audience fell in love with Reg Huston's Alfred P. Doolittle. He has a full deep voice played with a lovely weasely behavior. His Get Me to the Church on Time brought down the house.

•

A REAL VOCAL talent was Jon Gruett as Freddy Eynsford Hill. Freddy is not an ingratiating part — he tries too hard — but Gruett caught our sympathy as the forlorn lover who loses the girl. Equally deft and impressive was the statuesque Ronda Skolnick who played Mrs. Higgins, the Professor's mother. Her bewilderment at her truculent son, and her espousal efforts for the maltreated Eliza were touching.

The greatest asset of this musical is its score. Though filled with familiar tunes, there is still a thrill at hearing an orchestra play them. Conductor Mark E. Watters was equal to his task. An interesting sidelight about the Hidden Valley house is that the conductor is shown on a closed circuit television monitor so that he can also conduct the singers. He held the whole production together.

Another big plus is director and choreographer Fred Weiss. His handling of crowds grows steadily in scope. His choreography for this performance was brilliantly innovative. An astounding accomplishment was that one of his principal dancers still had the breath control to sing a small number after a particularly strenuous routine.

An exciting thing here is the vibrant enthusiasm of each and every actor and dancer. Weiss controlled those on stage in a merry swirl of action that was compelling.

•

MY FAIR LADY is a show eminently worth seeing. One has only to glance around at the faces of the audience during the intermission to see how much they were enjoying themselves. I overheard one man in the throng say that he had seen the musical in New York, in Los Angeles, and in San Francisco, but he found himself enjoying this one best.

The performances run through Sept. 7. Seats are not reserved, so an early arrival is advised.

"WHY CAN'T a woman be more like a man?" laments Professor Higgens (Al Ellington) and Col. Pickering (Jim Jensen) in Lerner and Loewe's beloved musical My Fair Lady on stage Saturday and Sunday, July 19-20 at the Hidden Valley Theatre, Carmel Valley.

'Taming of the Shrew' plays at Hartnell College

William Shakespeare's ribald comedy The Taming of the Shrew will be staged Thursday, Friday and Sunday, July 17-18 and 20 at the Hartnell College Studio Theatre, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. The Western Stage production curtains at 8 p.m.; the Sunday show begins at 2 p.m.

First performed in late 16th century London at the Globe Theatre, the comedy has been adapted for contemporary audiences. The romantic Spanish era of California is brought to life as Petruchio becomes a lusty Don Juan and Kate a scheming senorita. The foray into the age-old battle of the sexes remains the same, unchanged since the Bard first penned the tale.

Directed by William Wolak, The Taming of the Shrew stars Matt McKenzie and Annie Combs as the battling lovers; Jeff Hudelson as Baptista Minolo; Jill Hill portrays Bianca, Baptista's younger daughter, pursued by many; and Gremio, an old merchant of Monterey and suitor of Bianca is Robert Frederick Adams.

Additional performances are scheduled July 20 and 29, and Aug. 5 at 8 p.m. with matinee planned July 13.

Admission is $5.50, Friday and Saturday; $4.50, Tuesday through Thursday and $3.50 on Sunday.

For reservations, phone (408) 758-1221.

Theatre review:

'Charley's Aunt' doesn't show her age

By MARC RIVETTE

FOR A LADY born in 1892, Charley's Aunt barely shows her wrinkles at the ripe old age of 88.

Her roisterous spunk is handled beautifully by Robert Hall in the Western Stage repertory season of Hartnell Theatre. Hall is one of six A.C.T. trained actors in the cast of 10. The whole cast brings a fire of vigor to the stage that is a great pleasure to watch.

Even though it was written in the Gay '90s, it shows little of the posturing melodrama that was popular at the time. Oh, there are direct asides to the audience, and everything is wrapped up in a happy pink bow package, but the comedy is lusty and genteel at the same time.

It is laid in Oxford College, where two friends, Jack Chesney and Charley Wykeham, played with consummate skill by dancer Thomas Harrison and Michael Young, have fallen in love with Kitty Verdum and Amy Spettigue. Since Charley's aunt is due to arrive, they invite the two ladies to lunch to meet her.

When the aunt telegraphs that she is unable to come, they are in a pickle, for it was unheard of, and immoral, for two nubile young ladies to be in the same drawing room with two young men, without the presence of an older woman.

Faced with the dilemma of Donna Lucia's defection, they impress their friend, Lord Fancourt Babberley, who is modeling his female costume for a play, into service as a stand-in for the aunt.

His introduction as Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez is one of the most hilarious moments of the play. Indeed, it unleashes the laughter into orbit. He opens his mouth soundlessly, trying to speak, but does not know whether to talk in falsetto. Fury and indignation at his two friends make him speechless. Finally he acknowledges the introduction with a squeak.

•

FROM THERE ON, the farce grows in intensity, particularly when Jack's father, Sir Francis Chesney, decides to court him/her for her money, and for the financial benefit of his son. To add spice, Stephen Spettigue, the uncle of Charley's girl, and guardian of Jack's, also is smitten with Babberley—not uninfluenced, too, by her great wealth. While Tim Boisvert's wooing is gentlemanly, Jeff Hudelson's is done as though he were calling deaf hogs. He is "gifted" with a stentorian voice that always attains the most ear-splitting volume. Perhaps some volume control would improve his posturing.

Enter, then, Deborah Akhet as the real Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez with Dona Liggett, her ward. Akhet plays the real Charley's aunt with a smooth poised dignity and an amused sense of humor. To make matters worse, the ward is the young lady that Babberley—inconveniently clad in woman's clothes—is in love with.

It is wonderful to see the three college boys played by men of college age. Their friendly punching and roughhousing together is just exactly right and much better than the middle aged men who have been assigned the role in pictures.

Kurt Reinhardt plays the servant Brasset in a way that makes the audience love him. His long asides to theatergoers involved us in the conspiracy to our delight.

The director Suzanne Allyn is our gain from Montana, for she deals with the cast and the farce with a deft and jubilant hand. Her timing is superb, aided by the sets of Rex Heuschkel, who takes the basic modular set of previous productions and makes it idiosyncratic to this 1890s period.

This fourth play of the summer season continues through Aug. 7, interspersed with The Taming of the Shrew. Hartnell's presentation of the Western Stage has audiences bubbling with excitement. Again, a hearty recommendation.

Hamlet opens Thursday at outdoor Forest Theater

Beneath the starlit Carmel night, Hamlet, William Shakespeare's great tragedy of a Danish prince, will return to the outdoor stage of the historic Forest Theater Thursday, July 17 for the first time since 1941. The 400-year-old classic will be performed at 8:30 p.m.

The traditional pine log fires will be lit each Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through August as Hamlet is performed in repertory with Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead, alternately each weekend. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m.

First staged at London's Globe Theatre in 1600, Hamlet is the tragic tale of a prince haunted by the ghost of his father King Hamlet who died at the hands of Claudius, his brother. To attain all trappings of power Claudius has, in turn, married Prince Hamlet's mother Gertrude, Queen of Denmark, to gain the throne.

Obsessed with revenge, Hamlet spurns the love of his cousin Ophelia and plots to end the lives of those he holds responsible for the king's death.

Director Peter Magee, a Carmel resident, received a bachelor's degree in theater arts and continued with graduate studies at Southern Illinois University. While at that school, he had an acting assistantship and was awarded the Sherwin F. Abrams Award for directing.

Later he appeared at the Joseph Papp Theater and Cubiculo Theater in New York City in the premiere of The Debate. His directing credits include Albee's Zoo Story, The Father by Strindberg, The Andersonville Trial and more. Locally he has directed Play It Again, Sam for the Studio Theatre and Naval Postgraduate School Theatre; and The Comedy of Errors and Romeo and Juliet for the Forest Theater Guild. For the past three years he has acted and directed in Seattle, Wash.

Danny Gochnauer portrays the tortured Hamlet. Among his local theater appearances are parts in Promises, Promises, Love is a Time of Day, Jaques Brel, South Pacific, Norman, Is That You? and Hay Fever.

Claudius is played by Patrick Willis. A high school drama teacher for many years, Willis has also directed and acted in community theater. His acting credits include Orlando in As You Like It, Mercutio in Romeo and Juliet and Ferdinand in The Tempest.

Rosemary Garrison, a Carmel Valley resident, is Queen Gertrude. She returns to the Forest Theater stage where she worked three years ago with Magee as the nurse in Romeo and Juliet. Since then she has attended A.C.T.'s Summer Training Congress in San Francisco; and performed locally in Death of a Salesman as Linda; Lion in Winter as Eleanor; and in a prize-winning play that won Carmel's Festival of Firsts playwriting competition.

Additional performances of Hamlet are planned July 24-25, Aug. 2-3, 7-8, 16-17, 21-22 and 30-31.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead will be staged July 26-27, 31, Aug. 1, 9-10, 14-15, 23-24 and 28-29.

Hamlet and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead are productions of the Forest Theater Guild in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College.

Admission is $4, adults and $3 for seniors, students and military. Advance tickets are available in Carmel at Bartlett Music or Do Re Mi Music; Abinante Music Store in Monterey and Lily Walker Records and Music, Pacific Grove.

For reservations, phone 624-1531.

Auditons slated for Pulitzer Prize play

Auditions for the Pulitzer Prize winning play Why Marry, the third presentation of the Carmel Festival of Firsts, will be conducted Monday and Tuesday, July 20 and 21 in the Leonard Carpenter Hall of Sunset Center, Carmel, at 7:30 p.m.

Written in 1917 by Jesse Lynch Williams, a playwright whose family still resides in Carmel, Why Marry is an insightful look at the plight of women in the early 1900s and still pertinent today.

Richard Tyler, director of Community and Cultural Affairs for the City of Carmel, said that it is the intention of the Festival to present old as well as new original works. The play will be directed by Peter Magee, who has worked with the Forest Theater Guild, the Wharf Theatre and the Studio Theatre.

Roles are available for all adult age categories. Scripts can be picked up at the Sunset Center director's office.

Why Marry will be staged Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, Sept. 11-13 and 18-20.

For more information, phone 624-3996.

DR. BRUNO BETTELHEIM, author and psychologist, will lead a two-day seminar on the modern family crisis Friday and Saturday, July 18-19 at Santa Catalina School, Monterey, as part of the off-campus program offered by UC Extension, Santa Cruz. For more information, phone (408) 429-2351.

Staff Players stage 'The Enchanted' and 'Dead Man's Mill'

Jean Giraudoux's The Enchanted and Dead Man's Mill by local playwright and director Marcia Gambrell Hovick will be staged Sunday, July 20 by the Staff Players Repertory Company. The plays will be presented at The York School Theatre, 2½ miles east of Monterey on Highway 68.

Homecooking and a tale of courage in the heart of the Mother Lode are promised in Dead Man's Mill. Preceding the curtain, a lunch of meat and potatoes al'Italiane (spaghetti) will be served. Curtain is at 2 p.m.

Admission, including lunch, is $5.50, general, and $3 for seniors and children.

The Enchanted is a study of a woman at the time between youth and adulthood. She hovers in the moral and legendary world of spirit with a promise of peace, and in the world of life promised by a young man. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m.

Admission is $4.50, adults, and $2.50 for children and seniors.

For reservations and information, phone 375-6555 or 624-1531.

Scots turn out for Caber Parade Saturday

The Farrells, McKays, Scofields and McDougals will all turn out for the annual Parade of the Caber Saturday, July 19 when members of the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula and a bagpiping band parade through the streets of Carmel.

The traditional festivities will herald the 1980 Scottish Highland Games planned Saturday, July 26 at the Monterey Peninsula College football field from 10 a.m-4:30 p.m.

At 4 p.m., brawny Scots will carry the 120-pound, 19-foot pine pole from the Red Lion Tavern, Seventh and San Carlos, where it permanently resides, along Ocean Avenue then back to the pub.

Accompanying the caber procession will be bagpipes and drums of the Monterev Scottish Pipe Band. Michael D'Avenas of Carmel is the band's pipe major and Harold Dean of Mountain View is lead stroke.

Spectators are welcome.

For more information, phone 649-7381.

Sierra Club sets weekend hikes

Two shoreline strolls are planned this weekend by the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club.

A six-mile round-trip hike along Sunset Beach is on the outing calendar Saturday, July 19. Hikers are welcome to meet at 8:30 a.m. in the Cinema 70 parking lot, Del Monte Center, Monterey for the 36-mile drive north on Highway 1. Bring lunch and beverage. The suggested carpool fee is $3.

A leisurely four-mile walk from Moss Landing to Pajaro Beach is scheduled Sunday, July 20. Meet at the Cinema 70 parking lot at 12:30 p.m. to carpool. Hikers are advised to bring water, a windbreaker and walking shoes.

For further information, phone 372-6626.

Noted psychologist Bettelheim offers seminar in Santa Cruz

Troubles besetting the modern family and ways of making this ancient institution serve its members better will be the focus of a two-day seminar lead by psychologist Bruno Bettelheim Friday and Saturday, July 18-19. Sponsored by University of California Extension, Santa Cruz, the program titled On Families will be conducted at Santa Catalina School, Mark Thomas Drive, Monterey.

One of the world's most prominent psychologists, Bettelheim says that the modern family remains—as it has throughout history—the best institution for raising children, for escaping loneliness and for support in times of hardship, sickness and old age.

Bettelheim suggests that perhaps too much is demanded of the modern family. Expectations must be adjusted, he suggests so that the family can again function to the satisfaction of all members.

An authority on autism in children, Bettelheim is former professor of psychology and psychiatry at the University of Chicago. Among his books are Love is Not Enough, Dialogues with Mothers, The Empty Fortress and The Uses of Enchantment.

His seminar will be devoted to the causes of family difficulties and realistic expectations of the family. Sessions will meet from 7-10 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday. The fee is $40 or if taken for credit, $45.

For more information, phone UC Extension in Santa Cruz at (408) 429-2351.

Pacific Grove to celebrate 75th Feast of Lanterns

The 75th Feast of Lanterns, a week-long celebration of the founding of Pacific Grove 104 years ago, will begin Wednesday, July 23. Festivities will continue through Sunday, July 27 at various locations throughout "Butterfly Town, U.S.A." Most events are free and spectators are welcome.

Celebrating its Diamond Jubilee this year the Feast of Lanterns began in 1905 as a culmination of the annual Methodist Chautauqua. The Saturday night pageant tells the story of a search by a Mandarin for his daughter who has run away with her lover rather than marry a nobleman of her father's choice. The famous "Blue Willow" china pattern also recounts the legend.

Activities scheduled on the first day of the Festival include:

• The 15th annual Seniors Feast of Lanterns Tennis Tourney. Match play begins at 9 a.m. at the Pacific Grove Community Center, 515 Junipero St. Spectators are welcome at no charge.

• An exhibit of Oriental art on view at the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., from 1-5 p.m. Watercolor portraits will be painted by Jeanne Link. Historical photographs collected by Pat Hathaway will also be shown. Admission is free; everyone welcome.

• A Victorian and Oriental fashion show with dresses worn by Pacific Grove ladies presented at 2:30 p.m. at Chautauqua Hall. Everyone is welcome to the free program. Refreshments will be served.

• The Magic Pearl Puppets will entertain children and adults at 3 p.m. in Chautauqua Hall. Everyone is welcome to the free program.

• A melodrama performed in honor of special guest Queen Topaz and princesses at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific streets, Monterey. Tickets are $4, adults; $3 for teenagers; and $2 for children under 12. For reservations, phone 375-4916.

Additional activities planned through Sunday, July 27 include the procession of Queen Topaz, her royal court and entertainers with lighted Oriental lanterns and fireworks Saturday, July 27; the traditional Feast of Lanterns Chicken Barbecue, sailboat races, the Feast of Lanterns Pet Parade, golf tournaments and more.

For additional information, phone 373-3304.

Festival Theatre of California professional education program

European trained actors, Alina Szpak and Robert Fleet, are the guest instructors for the Festival Theatre of California's six-week Professional Education Program July 21-Aug. 29. Classes will be conducted at York School, 2½ miles east of Monterey on Highway 68.

Festival Theatre program director Nonnie Vishner will also lead courses. He will instruct students in T'ai Chi Chu'an, improvisation and ensemble techniques developed under Robert Benedetti. Vishner has experience in theater acquired working in Los Angeles in theater, television and motion pictures.

Alina Szpak (pronounced Shpock) was trained at the Leningrad Institute of Theatre, Music and Cinematography. She directed and performed repertory in Poland and appeared in more than 25 films for the Polish film and television industry.

Robert Fleet has taught a version of the Lessac vocal technique as well as British, Cockney, Irish, French and German dialects for the past three years. He also directed and performed in professional repertory theater in the United States and Poland. In Poland, Fleet worked with Ms. Szpak employing the Stanislavski Actor's Training technique. He and Ms. Szpak currently reside in New York and have been instructors for the Baltimore Theatre Project.

For further information, write the Festival Theatre, P.O. Box 1302, Salinas, Calif. 93902 or phone (408) 758-1587.

Jack Laycox opens eighth one-man show at Gallery Americana

The eighth annual one-man show of works by impressionist Jack Laycox will open Saturday, July 19 with an artist's reception at Miner's Gallery Americana, Mission and Sixth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to meet the artist from 4-7 p.m.

New impressionist interpretations from North America, Europe and the Orient as well as work from a recent trip to Central and South America which includes scenes of the ancient Inca Empire of Peru and Equador, will be displayed.

During the past year, Laycox's paintings have been displayed at group exhibitions at the Fresno Art Center, San Bernardino County Art Museum, Zellerbach Center, San Francisco and more. He was previously honored with exhibits of his paintings and watercolors by the Society of Western Artists Annuals in San Francisco.

Among the museums which have shown his works are the DeYoung of San Francisco, the Royal Watercolor Society of London and the National Academy AWS Annuals in New York City.

Laycox has been recognized in Who's Who In American Art, Who's Who in the West, the International Encyclopedia of Artists and in Personalities of the West.

His works may be viewed through Aug. 10. Gallery hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

For further information, phone 624-5071.

Cal Tjader sextet to perform July 30 at Sunset Center

It has been 21 years since the Monterey Jazz Festival presented its first Festival Preview. It was in 1959 that Cal Tjader was introduced from the stage of Sunset Center, Carmel, in the last of the Jazz at Sunset series.

He will once again appear at Sunset Center Wednesday, July 30 at 8 p.m. Performing with Tjader will be his sextet: Vince Lateano, drums; Poncho Sanchez, percussion and conga; Rob Fisher, bass; pianist Al Zulaica; Roger Glenn, flute and percussion; and Tjader himself on vibraphone. Special guest artist will be guitarist Mundell Lowe, a Monterey Peninsula resident.

This is the first of a series of previews sponsored by the non-profit Monterey Jazz Festival.

Tjader has brought the influence of Latin rhythm and jazz together and popularized them in contemporary music. "Tjader can cook ... his music knows no boundaries—Afro-Cuban, jazz and pop are merely its elements—and combines commercial accessibility with the most pure musicianship," says John Wasserman.

Tjader joined the original Dave Brubeck Octet while still an undergraduate at San Francisco State College. Between 1954 and 1962 Tjader recorded more than 20 albums for the Fantasy label. He has recorded with Vince Guaraldi, Stan Getz and Willie Bobo.

Tickets are $6 in advance and $6.50 at the door and available in Monterey at the Jazz Festival office, 444 Pearl St., Abinantes Music, 425 Alvarado, and at Carmel Music, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel.

For further information, phone 373-3366.

Carmel artist wins State Fair prize

COLORFUL SCOTTISH PERSONALITY Barclay Ferguson pauses in his studio. A Carmel artist, he can boast the Scottish title Right Honorable the Viscount Ferguson of Lamond, Brigadier, R.W., R.H.G., R.H.M. Ferguson recently won first prize in the Fine Arts section of the 1980 California State Fair for his surrealistic painting (right) Toy Barber in the Antique Store.

Ferguson is identified as a surrealist painter because of the photographic or super-realistic techniques employed in his work.

Ferguson's prize winner Tin Toy Barber in the Antique Store is a large painting (78" x 60") and part of his series on toys and games. Three other paintings from this group have won first prize or best of show awards in recent national exhibits.

Winning awards is nothing new to Ferguson. In 1951 he won the Royal Scottish Academy Stuart Prize (a scholarship), and in 1958-60 another scholarship at the Instituto Allende, Mexico. Other first prizes were won at the Northern California Competitive show, 1972-73; the 1973 Monterey County Fair; the Coral Gables National Exhibition, 1980, and more.

Two years ago Ferguson was elevated to the Jacobite Peerage for furthering the cause of Scottish Art. His title is the Right Honorable the Viscount Ferguson of Lamond, Brigadier, R.W., R.H.G., R.H.M.

Recent works by Ferguson may be viewed at the Zantman Art Galleries, Mission and Sixth, Carmel.

REMEMBER WHEN?

COUNCIL FAVORS HALL IN DEVENDORF PARK

Both the municipal advisory board and the city council of Carmel favor location of city buildings on block 69.

As soon as the city attorney returns from his vacation it is believed that steps will be taken to refer the matter to the voters. Citizens of Carmel must decide whether or not block 69, park and playground property, may be put to another use.

Both council and planning board favor block 69 as a combined park and site for city buildings, such as a city hall and fire station.

CARMEL NOT DEAD

Carmel ain't so dead when the Monterey County Trust and Savings Bank can build a palatial bank on Dolores street, charge it off to expense, and still show a $100,000 increase in their $7,000,000 statement of resources of January 1, 1930. This showing is all the more amazing when you consider it was achieved in a period of country-wide depression, a time of embarrassment for banks. That they were able to increase their dividend in the face of this, and still show the increase is still more astonishing. It speaks volumes for the present, past, and especially the future of Monterey county.

ROAD NEARLY READY

Within the next five or six weeks, it is believed, the new highway connecting Pacific Grove and the Carmel hill toll gate will be ready for use. Such is the prediction of A.A. Caruthers, fifth district supervisor.

COUNCIL TO STUDY $269,138 BUDGET

The Carmel City Council issues an invitation to citizens and taxpayers to attend the first budget session Friday night, city hall, at 7:30 o'clock.

The biggest budget in Carmel's history will be before the council with an expected increase of about $45,000 in revenue from sales tax increase alone. Total revenue will be $269,138, with property tax remaining 55 cents.

PARKING METERS FOR CARMEL?

The Hotelmen's Association (it has recently changed its name to Business Property Owners' Association) circulated a petition which defeated a proposed parking district that would have financed purchase of parking lots by taxes on business property. The City Council, miffed at what some of the councilmen considered obstructionism on the part of the hotelmen, said, in effect, "That was our solution to financing parking lots. What's yours?"

The hotelmen, thus cornered, suggested parking meters, knowing they were safe in doing so since parking meters are a source of revenue that the community will not tolerate.

PLANNERS WITHDRAW SUBDIVISION PLAN APPROVAL

The Carmel Planning Commission reversed itself yesterday when it rescinded its approval of the controversial Hatton Fields rezoning attempt.

The Carmel Planning Commission had previously reacted favorably to the application of Floyd Carter to rezone his four-acre tract in the Hatton Fields area adjacent to Carmel. Carter wants to trim the zoning requirement to a 10,000 square-foot minimum so that he can build 16 houses on the tract instead of the eight now allowed.

Mrs. Margery Voustas will be guest soloist.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

You'll know you're old when all you exercise is caution

BY THE REV. LARRY FARRELL

An Indian maharaja who was assassinated because he delayed in liquidating his arch-rival once observed: "To walk is better than to run, to stand is better than to move, to sit is better than to stand, to lie better than to sit and to be dead is the best of all."

He got his wish.

How much this dismal view of life may we attribute to a debilitating climate of India we do not know, but Montaigne's phrase is more acceptable: "Let death take a man still planting cabbages."

Without vitality, life becomes as void of gaiety and zest as a wood where no birds sing. O Lord, may we always keep active working for you through our neighbors. Finally, may we remember that we've reached old age when all we exercise is caution.

WOULD YOU BE INTERESTED in sprucing up a 1973 Discoverer Motor Home? I can't seem to find the time. It's a dandy 22-footer with air conditioning, power steering and brakes, cruise control, AM-FM stereo-tape, gas-electric refrigerator, 4-burner stove with oven, forced-air propane heat, two dinettes, three sleeping areas, lots of cabinets, closet, bathroom with shower, Onan generator and a host of other extras. It even has an in-dash computer to calculate your mileage as you drive, and gets remarkably good gas mileage for a motor home (10-13 mpg). All it needs is a little TLC to get it back into shape. Price is negotiable but we're thinking in the $5,000- $6,000 range. If you're interested, call 659-4630. ★

Public Notices

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 80-7
AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING A 15 MILE-PER-HOUR SPEED LIMIT ON CERTAIN STREETS WITHIN CITY LIMITS

WHEREAS, Section 22358.3 of the Vehicle Code of the State of California, as amended by Ch. 11, Stats. 1959, permits a municipality to reduce the prima facie speed limit below 25 miles-per-hour for certain streets, based on an engineering and traffic survey; and,

WHEREAS, the Planning Commission and the Planning and Conservation Committee of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, have conducted a traffic survey and have recommended that the prima facie speed limit on Dolores between Vista and Fourth Avenue, on San Antonio between the north City line and Fourth Avenue and on Scenic Road between Ocean Avenue and Santa Lucia be reduced below 25 miles-per-hour.

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. That Article 1A—SPEED LIMITS, is hereby amended by the addition of a 15 mile-per-hour speed limit on the streets indicated as set forth in Exhibit "A".

Section 2. That the Superintendent of Public Works is hereby directed to place the appropriate signs and markings to give proper notice of this action.

Section 3. Effective Date. This Ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its final passage and adoption.

PASSED AND ADOPTED by the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea this 7th day of July, 1980, by the following roll call vote:
AYES: COUNCILMEMBERS: ARNOLD, BROWN, LLOYD, LAIOLO
NOES: COUNCILMEMBERS: NONE
ABSENT: COUNCILMEMBERS: BRUNN

SIGNED:
BERNARD LAIOLO,
Mayor of said City

ATTEST:
PATRICIA JOYCE DANTES,
City Clerk thereof

EXHIBIT "A"
15 MILE-PER-HOUR SPEED LIMITS:
That portion of Dolores between Vista and Fourth Avenue, that portion of San Antonio between the north City line and Fourth Avenue and the portion of Scenic Road between Ocean Avenue and Santa Lucia are hereby established as City streets upon which the prima facie speed limit shall be 15 miles-per-hour.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons having any interest in the matter, that the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, will conduct a Public Hearing in the Council Chambers of said City on Monday, August 4, 1980 at the hour of 7:30 P.M. or as soon thereafter as interested persons may be heard, to consider the following:

An Ordinance amending the definition of home occupation to allow dramatics to be included as one of the arts.

Said Ordinance would amend Part X, Division 5, Section 1350.61 of the Municipal Code, Home Occupations.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the aforesaid Public Hearing will be held and this Notice is given, pursuant to Government Code Sections 65854 and 65856.

PATRICIA JOYCE DANTES,
City Clerk

CERTIFICATION OF CITY CLERK

I, PATRICIA JOYCE DANTES, the undersigned, City Clerk of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of Ordinance No. 80-7, which has been published or posted pursuant to the laws of the State of California and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea.
DATED this 8th day of July, 1980.

FREE WANT ADS

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is happy to be here and we always look forward to meeting our subscribers. As a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a FREE WANT AD every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by 3 p.m. Monday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 16 words. The Pine Cone is not responsible for errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new ad on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse any free ad for any reason. Free ads must be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales.

This label is your ticket for a free ad and must appear here on any ad you turn in. Clip this label from the front page of your weekly Pine Cone.

ATTACH THE ADDRESS LABEL ON YOUR PERSONAL COPY OF THE PINE CONE HERE

CLASSIFICATION _____ Please print your ad below, one word per space

AMAGNIFICENT ACREAGE IN THE WARM VALLEY SUN
Carmel Valley

Two beautiful parcels of rolling hills dotted with live oaks, green the year around; one piece consisting of 8.6 acres, the other 15.5. Blanketed with wild flowers in the spring, the peaceful slopes are cooled by ocean breezes yet protected from the fog by a series of gently curved ridges.

The Valley today is a pleasant way of life; a happy combination of rural and cultural advantages. Its cosmopolitan population enjoys several fine golf courses, excellent tennis facilities, riding and hiking trails and fine fishing; plus motion picture and legitimate theaters, choice small resorts, guest ranches and many quality restaurants. AN AUTHENTIC HACIENDA IN PEBBLE BEACH

Built in 1926 by skilled craftsmen using the finest materials and now listed in the "NATIONAL Register of Historic Places," this incredible residence conveys a feeling of solid, rugged durability throughout! Crafted by native Mexican artisans and carefully updated to maintain its architectural style, its rugged honesty of design is reinforced by the use of the simplest building materials—stone, logs, boulders, wrought iron bindings. Imagine a 60' living room with hand-hewn log beams, a mammoth fireplace built of granite boulders, a stone floor interspersed with handmade tiles! There's also a large "Gathering" room, a gallery/library reached by a log staircase, comfortable kitchen/breakfast area and, connected by a portico, a two-story bedroom wing with a master suite and three other bedrooms, each with its own bath. A separate building houses two more bedrooms and baths, a darkroom, hobby room and large shop/garage area. All of this is located on an acre, surrounded by beautiful, gnarled oaks, pines and native growth—making it a superb residence or perfect as a corporate retreat! $490,000 . . . FLEXIBLE FINANCING. CARMEL SUMMER DELIGHTS

BEST BUY ON CARMEL SIDE OF THE HILL

If you can find a house only two years old that features three bedrooms, two baths, dining room, living room, double garage and huge kitchen plus an oak-covered lot of oversized dimension for less money or better terms, buy it today. We don't think it can be done because this home offers you a loan of 60% of selling price at only 9¼% interest. And the owner might carry a small second. There, INFLATIONARY WORLD, beat that.

Do you have the money to match your taste? Most of us, unfortunately in today's world, don't have the dollars to keep up with our desires. But if you do and if you desire a home with three bedrooms, den, 3½ baths, living room, dining room, double garage, fabulous patio, and you want it close to everything, THIS is the place. Like most good things in life, it isn't free. Or, truth to tell, even close to free. It costs a bundle. But if you have such a financial blessing, there just isn't anything nicer for the area.

NOW IS THE TIME to buy one of these splendid
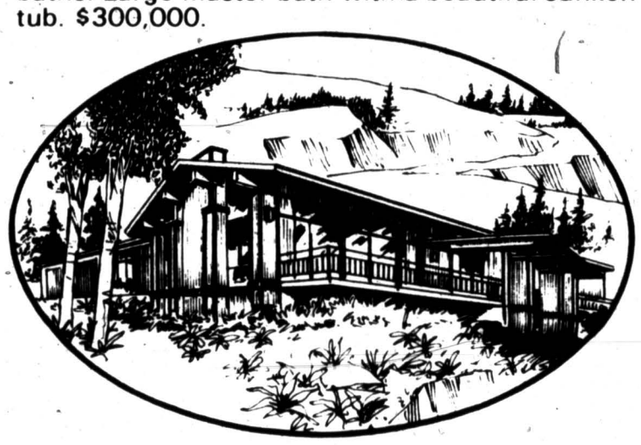
NEW HOMES

These fabulous view-homes are now finished—all ready to move in! Located on prized land, overlooking Carmel Valley. Many excellent features: designed by national award-winner Fred Brooks, private road, security gate, professional landscaping, underground utilities—natural gas, phone lines, cable TV—and much more! Now is your golden opportunity to own one of these fine homes. Come up and see all three.

CASA CUESTA. This handsome house, with its high-vaulted ceilings, has a wonderful feeling of richness and spaciousness. The living-room/dining-room combination, with a wet-bar and great fireplace, is elegance indeed. A splendid kitchen, too, plus a pantry. Two bedrooms, 2½ baths. Large master bath with a beautiful sunken tub. $300,000.



CASA GRANADA. This expansive home is cheered and brightened by a gallery-hall around a central flower-garden atrium. This house, too, has vaulted ceilings...and two fireplaces—one in the large living-room and one in the guest bedroom (or family room). Three bedrooms, 2½ baths. Exquisite master suite, with a 5'×7' sunken tub and Jacuzzi. $325,000.

CASA CAPITAN. Bright, light, cheerful. These are the words for this sunny home. Its spacious kitchen, with a helpful cook-island, is a woman's delight. There's a wet-bar, and a broad pass-thru to the living room. Two bedrooms, 2½ baths and large studio. Formal dining-room. Lavish sculptured floor-tile throughout. $350,000.

HOW TO GET THERE

Only 20 minutes from Carmel. Take Carmel Valley Road to Rancho Road (at Los Laureles Lodge), turn left onto Rancho, then right onto Middle Canyon Road to entry.

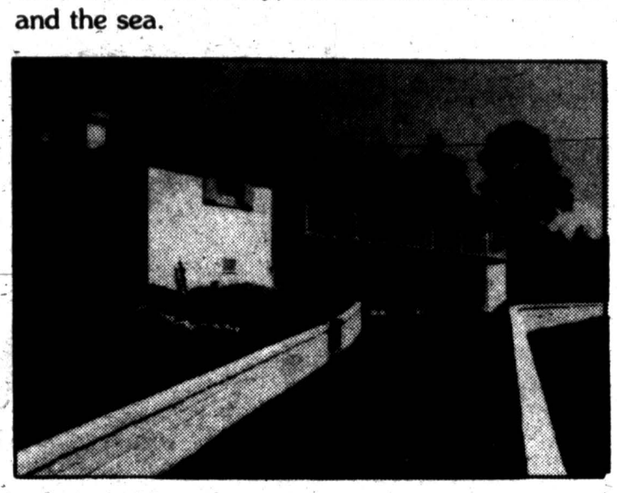
Villa Favorita

An extended, semi-circular, walled drive sweeps up to this spectacular 44-year-old home. A magnificent balcony, 6 bays wide, supported by 25 carved beams, spreads above the entrance and looks down on the parking plaza and out across the trees to the Valley, the Santa Lucia Mountains and the sea.



The entrance is a paneled colonial door flanked by carriage lamps, framed by Doric pilasters and a carved pediment. On this lower level are (a) the tiled entrance hall, (b) the outsized 2 car garage, (c) a charming rumpus room with 4 built-in bunks, a raised fireplace, beamed and planked ceiling, carpeted floors and (d) a decorative small bath with shower. The playroom is 20 x 25 and seems cozy!

A circular colonial stair rises from the entrance hall to the second level. This 2 story well is a miniature cathedral with great stained glass window, octagonal shape and planked ceiling. At the top a hall opens through double doors to the balcony. Or you can turn right toward, the 3 bedrooms and tremendous 3-room bath complex. The latter looks toward the hills and sea, and a mirrored ceiling gives one the odd feeling it goes up and up. Other mirrors add to the illusion.

Bedrooms are either plank-walled or finished with heavy vinyl paper. All are carpeted, all have plank ceilings, one has a charming corner fireplace.

A left turn at the top of the stair brings you into the cathedral beamed living room: deepset picture window facing south, virginal white fireplace on the north wall, spacious shelves all about, and extraordinary floors of straight grain random planks stained a cedar red. Beyond this is an enormous, tile-floored solarium: beamed ceilings again, the other side of the stained glass window, 3 skylights, and glass wall opening to a gigantic brick patio with space for all kinds of outdoor living.

The kitchen occupies the east side, a long pullman style spanning the house: breakfast nook toward the south, glass door to patio on the north, tiled walls, oak floors, butcher block counters, Jenn-Air range and stainless steel appliances.

There are dozens of "touches". Surprise closets, cabinets galore, custom made brass hardware, many deepset windows with window seats, shutters, woodwork one seldom finds, mirrored doors, cedar-lined closet. There's a 3rd bath off the back bedroom, which also opens to the solarium.

This splendid home sits on more than ½ acre which slopes down to Hatton Road. The number is 25855. The price is $479,500.

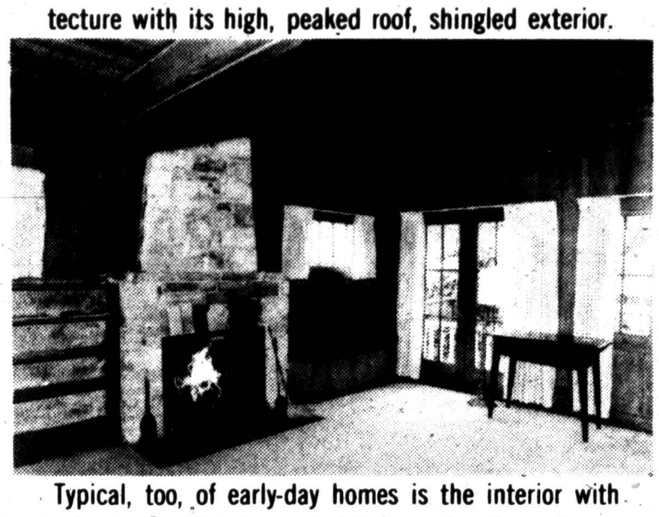
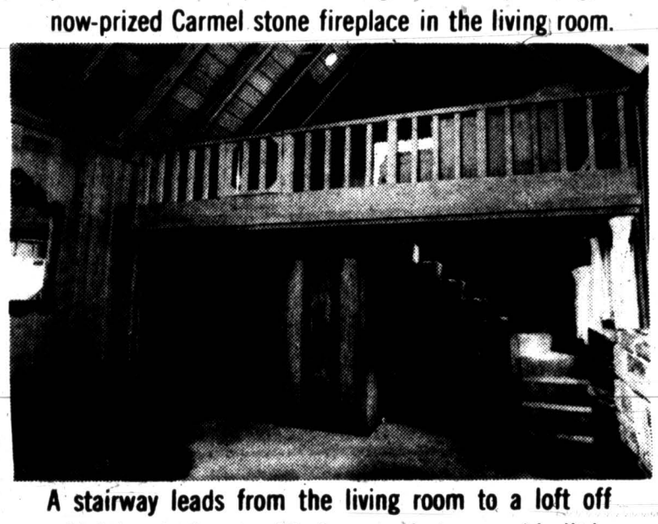
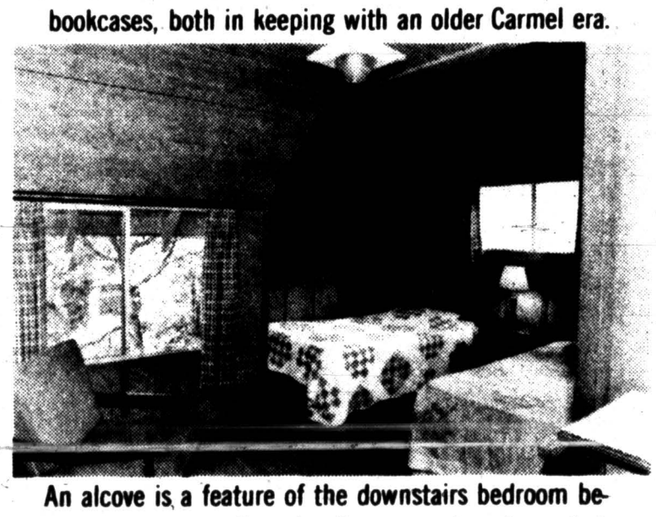
This captivating cottage on a woodsy street south of Ocean Avenue is close to both Sunset Center and town, also typifies the charm of earlier-era Carmel architecture with its high, peaked roof, shingled exterior.



Typical, too, of early-day homes is the interior with prime redwood in beamed ceilings and wall paneling, a now-prized Carmel stone fireplace in the living room.



A stairway leads from the living room to a loft off which is a bedroom with dormer windows and built-in bookcases, both in keeping with an older Carmel era.



An alcove is a feature of the downstairs bedroom beyond which is a hallway leading to a redwood-paneled, compartmented bathroom with old-fashioned footed tub.

A windowed breakfast nook, with built-in benches and a table, also a "cooler," an outside-vented cupboard without which no older Carmel home was complete, are found in the kitchen off which is the service porch. Price of this cottage, exemplifying "Carmel Charm," and in an equally captivating setting of native oaks and pines, succulent-bordered pathways, is $169,500.
